Aboriginal People

Aborigines are Australia's indigenous people. Aboriginal people arrived in Australia many years ago, most likely from somewhere in Asia.

It is estimated that there are over 400,000 aboriginal people living in Australia, made up of around 600 distinct group of people.

They are well known for their strong spiritual beliefs that tie them to the land; a tribal culture of storytelling and art; and, like other indigenous populations, a different colonial history.

Interesting Facts

Indigenous artists often use natural materials such as ochre, bark, or sand to create their artwork.

Dot painting is a signature style of Aboriginal art, with each dot representing a story or connection to the land.
