Hades And The Magical Pendant

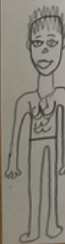

A long time ago, in Ancient Greece there lived a strong mighty hero called Hades, the hero of the underworld. Hades was blonde with emerald green eyes. Hades had a magical pendant which gave him his powers which he had lost. Hades must travel across Greece to find it.

Hades woke up and decided to go to the harbour. He stepped into a boat and set off. The sea was choppy and salty and the waves were crashing all over the place. He still continued. First he went to Crete but there was nothing "it's useless" mumbled Hades. Next he travelled to Crete and ran into somebody, he found out it was a god.

All of a sudden Hades heard a rumble in the sky then his boat started to shake, he turned around and he spotted an outline of the God of power, Epimetheus. He took a step closer to Hades "what's that in your hand" asked Hades "it's a trident that you will need but you will have to beware" replied Epimetheus "Be aware of what" questioned Hades but Epimetheus disappeared.

Hades ran into a beast called Scylla. Scylla was a beast that Hades was travelling across the ocean so Scylla scattered obstacles across the ocean but if Hades falls he doesn't get his pendant back but Hades managed to cross the obstacles but Scylla doesn't know that Hades knows about her magic scale so Hades used his trident that freezes people so Hades pointed the trident at Scylla and she froze so Hades on her stole the scale and she disappeared.

Hades finally found his pendant but the monster may be back.

Travel to the Atlantis

Long ago back in AD600 stood a strong and fierce God named Hunter who originated from Greece. Hunter kept a charming clam necklace in his bedroom to give to his wife named Aphrodite. One night, Hunter woke up but the necklace was not there. He had suspected that it had been stolen by the vicious devil mermaids who lived in the Atlantis.

Hunter couldn't leave his necklace unprotected so he packed his bags and sprinted down to the harbour. There he boarded the most ominous ship on the island. Hunter threw his bag onto the ship and set sail. The waves bumped smoothly and the sea was calm but Hunter didn't give up on his journey.

Hunter felt tired so he looked at the waves but he heard a bump on the ship so he went to investigate. Izumi the Queen of passing powers had jumped onto the ship, in her hand Hunter could see a torch. Izumi handed Hunter the torch and she said, "Hunter take this torch because you will need it for battle."

Hours later, Hunter finally arrived at Atlantis so he got out his diving tank and headed under water. The mermaids were here and ready for battle so Hunter got out his torch and headed towards them.

One of the mermaids bit Hunter and the torch fell out his hand, he thought he was going to lose until somebody jumped in, grabbed the torch and

Arina and the fierce Dragon

In Ancient Greek times, there lived a girl who was brave and old, that lived in wood, named Arina. Arina hunted for food and made friends with the animals. One late afternoon she found out a monster had separated the stones of peace. Everyone was afraid that there will be no more peace in the world. Arina knew she was brave and had to stop this.

Arina was told she had to find a cave somewhere in Rhodes. So she sailed across the dark deadgull ocean. When she got to Rhodes she noticed something strange, she had noticed that all the building had fallen or were set on fire. Arina was worried but she knew she could not let anyone down, so she searched and searched but she could not let anyone find it so she went back to her boat and sat alone until.

Suddenly smoke started to surround her and then a Goddess appeared and spoke of her journey she said to Arina

"My name is Nicea and I can help you, you will need to find a cave full of smoke."

Arina was confused and said puzzled "but I've looked everywhere."

Arina was tired and thirsty. She was walking through the beach, when she saw a boat and there were people on it. She shouted "help" and they came to her. She collapsed on the boat the people had some water and gave it to her Arina was sailed back to Crete and she spread the news.

In a puff of air she was gone. Arina turned around and found the right cave!

Arina crept into the dark gloomy cave. As she lurched into the light she saw two of the glimmering diamonds passing in the sunlight. She stepped closer and then arrows shot out from the crooked walls.

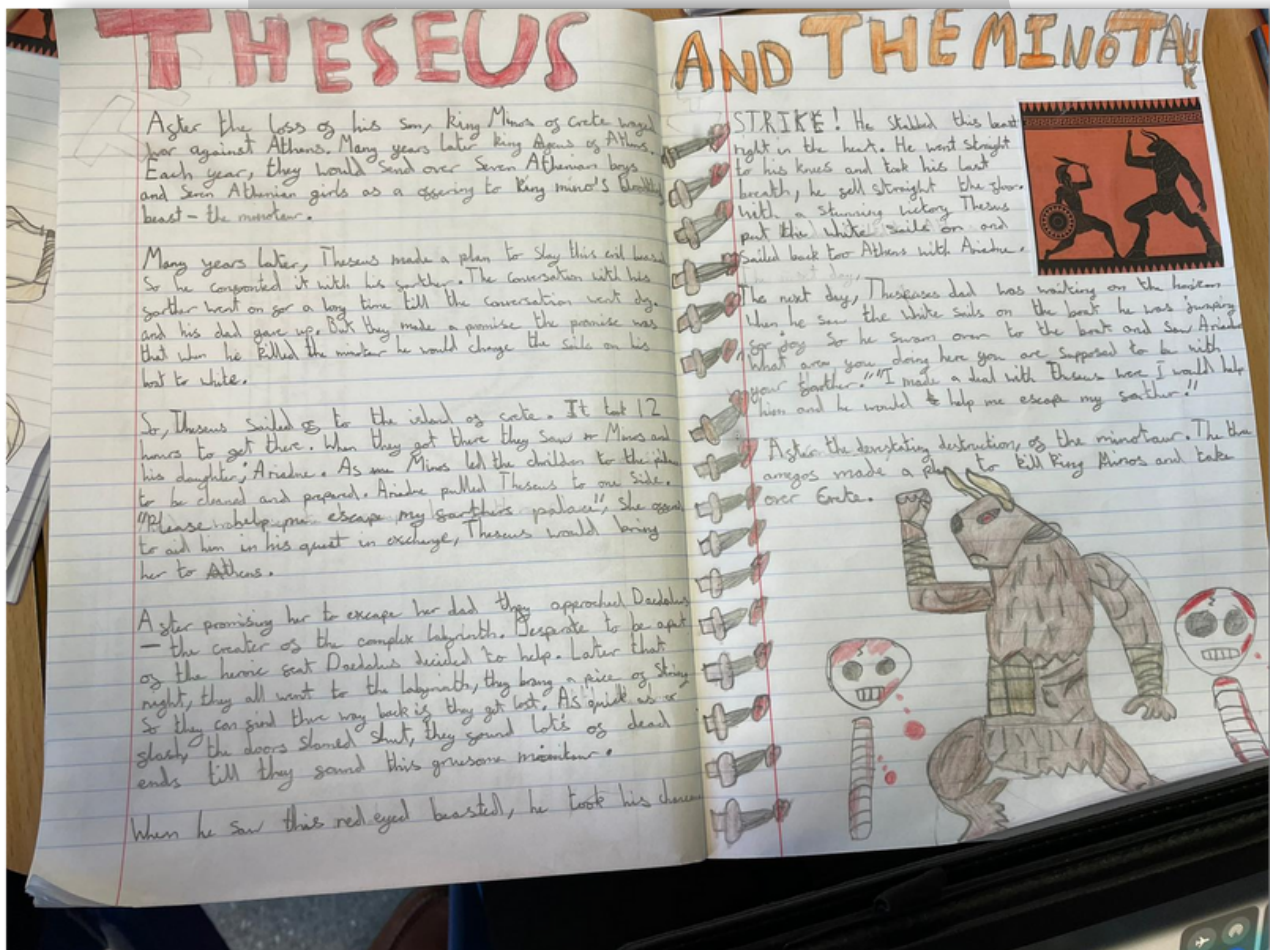

She said to herself, "If this was made for the stones of peace then it must be a trick."

So Arina had stayed on the floor that moved to get closer to the stones of peace. When she reached to the stones she was extremely happy she held both of the stones and suspiciously the cave started to fall apart and she was knocked out.

After a few hours Arina had awoken she remembered that she was getting stones. Arina stood up, and in front of her stood a enormous beast with spikes on its wings. She was terrified, but she used her bow and arrow and shot the beast. Fire came shooting out of his mouth, Arina used a sword she found when she woke up. But she dropped it and out came three more stones. Arina put all the stones together and shone it at the beast and he turned to stone.

One gloomy stormy night, I was sitting at my bedroom table past which writing down my personal things. I was very tired and just wanted to work in silence when and only hear the calm waves swishing and swooshing when suddenly I heard the annoying village going yay... yay... yay. As grumpy as I was I slammed the window shut still curious about why there was so much commotion. Then I realised I don't really care.

Suddenly, my candle blew out in a gust of wind. I heard a big horn blasting, everything went dark in the village. All of the villagers stopped but silence filled the air. I was afraid for a moment because the villagers stopped with their cheering.

Like a bolt I dashed up my spiral like stairs and found that a massive ship coming towards me. I jumped out of my skin and rushed to the lighthouse bulb to fix it. As I tried to carry the bulb I dropped my bulb panicked even more and plopped my self on the floor thinking this was the end.
