

SCHOOL CENTRED TEACHER TRAINING

Fylde Coast SCITT

1. What is the SCITT?

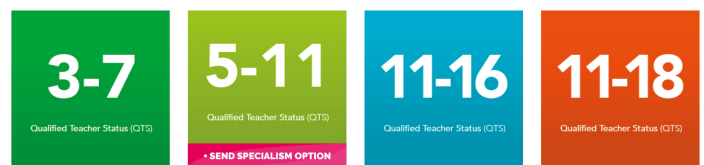

The programme is school-centred initial teacher training and it leads to Qualified Teacher Status which is the qualification you need to teach in schools. It's designed to maximise time spent on the job, in contrasting schools, to fully prepare candidates for life as a teacher on completion. It's a programme designed by our schools to grow our own workforce from within.

2. What are our entry requirements?

Candidates need GCSE [or equivalent] English and Maths, plus Science if you want to train in Primary. You need a degree but it doesn't necessarily have to be in the subject you wish to teach. There are plenty of subject knowledge enhancement courses that you will be paid to complete before the course starts, but most candidates have a relevant degree or at least an A Level if wanting to teach in secondary.

We are looking for passionate, compassionate people who care about making a difference for children and who have the personal and professional qualities to do so. Teaching is about personality and engagement. They don't care how much you know until they know how much you care.

3. Why teach on the Fylde Coast?

Wages in Blackpool are £8,000 per year lower than the national average, which means that teaching is one of the highest paid jobs here. As a newly qualified teacher, your starting pay is 15% above the national average graduate wage and it increases each year. In our region, some of the most popular jobs are within retail, tourism and the NHS. Teachers are earning more, on average, than all of those sectors and have 65 days of annual leave a year as opposed to 20! The pensions are superb too.

30% of children live below the poverty line in Blackpool, it's actually as high as 50% in some wards, which is considerably above the national average of 20%. By teaching, you could make a difference to that statistic. You could break the cycle.

4. What makes our teacher training programme unique?

Three key design aspects separate our programme from others:

Firstly, our programme is completely personalised to each candidate; no two people have the same experience because we only train a limited number of teachers each year and this keeps our employment rates above national average. Unlike the big university models where you could be one of 200 trainee teachers, we tailor the year to maximise your skills and you will therefore be better prepared to teach. We have our own supportive SCITT community, our own wellbeing programme and our own life coach.

Secondly, because our trainees don't have to attend University lectures, we have time to give them a carefully sequenced curriculum and a bespoke enhancement programme running alongside the mainstream school placements. Our trainees teach in primary schools, pupil referral units, Special Educational Needs settings, work with CAHMS and teach in Sixth Forms. They also spend time at our local private schools to teach children with English as an additional language. Again, trainee curriculum design is tailored to maximise preparation.

Finally, our graduates stay in teaching. Many of our graduates have secured promotional positions early on in their career and we believe that is the measure of effective teacher preparation.
