	NSPCC	NSPCC have launched a new campaign, Listen To Your Selfie, which aims to teach young people about online sexual abuse and what constitutes a healthy relationship. The campaign, which has been funded by BBC Children in Need, features two films where selfies come to life and question a situation – The Game focuses on a same-sex online grooming scenario, and The Party highlights peer-to-peer sexual pressure and grooming. CEO Peter Wanless said: “Most of us talk to people online and it’s a great way to stay connected and make new friends. But it can be a playground for paedophiles, exposing young people to groomers who trawl social networks and online game forums exploiting any vulnerabilities they may find. Young people may not understand what is right or wrong in a relationship, or what to do if something makes them feel uncomfortable, online or offline. ‘Listen To Your Selfie’ is aimed at helping young people recognise signs they are being manipulated, controlled or exploited so they feel empowered to make their own decisions or choices. We hope that by putting this in the spotlight we can help young people to feel able to speak up if they feel worried or scared about a situation or relationship.

Prevent Resources

Following on from the Extreme Dialogue UK launch earlier this month, we would like to share our new, open-access materials with you and direct your attention to our website on www.extremedialogue.org, as well as our Twitter, Facebook and YouTube channel.

The two UK films and resources feature Adam Deen and Billy McCurrie. Adam Deen was formerly a senior member of the now-banned Islamist extremist organisation, al-Muhajiroun. Billy McCurrie was 12 years old when his father was killed by the IRA. Consumed with anger, Billy joined the Ulster Volunteer Force (UVF) at 16, and a year later was ordered to kill.

§ Film links: Adam Deen and Billy McCurrie

The educational resources encourage an improved understanding of the causes and consequences of violent extremism and radicalisation, in order to build young people's resilience to extremism and develop their critical thinking skills. The resources are also intended to support teachers (and others working with young people) in confidently, constructively and safely discussing these controversial issues in a safe and open classroom environment and other educational settings. For more information on how our materials support teachers in fulfilling the Prevent duty, see our Prevent guide here. For further advice on delivering the Extreme Dialogue materials, see our Teacher's Handbook.
