INTRODUCTION FROM THE HEADTEACHER

Welcome back to the spring term. I hope you and your families had a happy and restful festive holiday. The last few days of the autumn term were certainly jam packed with events and it was lovely to see so many parents and families joining us for our end of term service. Congratulations to Woodpecker Class for an outstanding performance and thanks to Miss Tyson and her team for all their hard work rehearsing and staging the nativity.

Although this term is relatively short, we still have a lot to fit in. Fox Class will be off on their residential trip to Mill on the Brue just before half term and we will be holding an information meeting for Fox parents on Thursday 29th January at 3.30pm. After half term we will be holding our Spring parent conferencing sessions; dates will follow shortly.

READING FLUENCY AT CHEW STOKE SCHOOL

At Chew Stoke we have a love of reading and we aim for our children to develop a love of reading too. In school we use a Phonics programme called Unlocking Letters and Sounds. One strategy this scheme uses to support children's reading fluency is the reading and re-reading of texts.

Reading fluency is what we are promoting through the use of our selected systematic synthetic phonics programme. Reading fluency is the ability to read with accuracy and automaticity, using the appropriate intonation and expression to bring meaning to the words within a text, and subsequently enable the text to make complete sense.

Children must develop fluency to decode, blend and spell to the degree that these are somewhat automatic in nature, freeing up working memory when words or background knowledge of a text is unfamiliar.

Fluency is best achieved through the re-reading of texts and can be most effectively understood through the acquisition of accuracy, automaticity and prosody:

- Accuracy - includes decoding and word recognition resulting in reading the words correctly. (This is the first read when you receive a new phonics book)
- Automaticity - requires accuracy and is effortless reading at an appropriate speed. (This is the second read of a phonics book)

- Prosody - requires accuracy and leads to variation in volume, smoothness, pace, phrasing and expression. (The third read of a phonics book)

Unlocking Letters and Sounds has used research to develop a progressive phonics programme and, from this research, promotes repeatedly reading a text so that pupils are confident to decode and blend accordingly and can instead focus on the intonation and expression used. The cognitive demands placed upon pupils' working memory that underlie the development of reading fluency means that being familiar with the text itself enables pupils to allocate their working memory resource from decoding to instead practising reading fluency.

All the books we send home are based on your child's recent phonics assessment and our expectation is children read for approximately 10 to 15 minutes per evening. Reading every day, without gaps between reading is the best way to build fluency. If your child after the first and second read is reading with some fluency, please start to model reading and rehearsing together the reading of sentences using prosody (expression) and asking questions to predict, recall key events/ open ended questions which will demonstrate their understanding of what has been read. If your child is finding the books tricky, as they will increase in difficulty throughout the year, please speak to your child's class teacher who will reassess where your child is placed.

We are incredibly grateful for all the reading you are doing at home and we hope this explanation about re-reading texts demonstrates the importance of re-reading to support your child's reading fluency. If you have any questions about our phonics programme or how you can further support your child at home please do get in touch with Miss Hennessy and she would be happy to help as much as she can.
