

Eventually, as the mist had cleared his eyes caught sight of what he had been looking for. People stood at the opening of the eerie, mysterious cave frozen in fear the screams still echoing around the valley. Melodius, who had a daunting task ahead, took a step back. Suddenly, a river of blood oozed out of the monsters lair Heart pounding, Melodius gripped his shield and ventured further into the cave. He could taste intoxicating smoke that loomed over him. Shadows around the walls and a voice in Melodius' head told him to turn back. "Go turn back while you still can!" the voice would say in a freaky voice.

As Melodius stumbled further he could smell wretched, decaying flesh. Groans told him that he must be getting closer to the dreaded monster. Spider webs which looked like they could hold 10 tons hung above Melodius' head.

CRACK! BOOM! ROAR!

He had just stepped on remains of previous challenges. Melodius had just done something that would probably cost his life. What have I done ...?