

As Ariande came to the gate of the wicked Medufus' grave yard she froze in fear. Although the swirling, eerie mist was blocking her sight she still carried on with her treacherous mission. As the skeleton like trees waved repeatedly, Ariande moved a step at a time towards the gate.

When she was inside voices were saying go back go back go back NOW! Her knees were shaking. Her body was shivering. The grave stones stood up like soldiers in battle. Spiders scuttled up the grave stones. They froze. Ariande froze. There was silence through the grave yard. Suddenly, blood started to ooze out of the grave stones and making puddles on the floor. The stench of death hit Ariande in the face. The skeletons were scattered along the floor. Organs were hung up everywhere and the hearts still beating frantically. A flash of light swooped across the grave yard and...