

Deep in the Amazon rainforest

As Tepui wandered into the rainforest, he experienced wondrous sights.

He strolled over decayed leaves and he tripped over exposed roots. On a leaf, was a small and colourful tree frog and it quietly crawled along a branch. All around him, the humid, steamy mist rose up from the ground.

Hidden in the dappled light of the shadowy understory, a jaguar was stalking its prey. Eventually, the jaguar pounced out from behind a tree onto an unstrapped anteater.

Suspended from the vines, stalking, its prey, was a forest green Boa Constrictor. The stealthy snake was ready to pounce at what he thought was his next meal but it was actually a Bald eagle. That Bald Eagle was actually stalking the Boa Constrictor.
