

Deep in the Amazon rainforest

As Jack wandered deeper and deeper into the rainforest, he experienced wondrous and rare sights.

High above the rainforest, a beautiful Scarlet macaw soared through the clear-blue sky majestically. As the macaw squawked loudly, a flock of other macaws flooded the sky. They looked like paint in the sky. Underneath the macaws, there was a dark-green blanket of trees which stood like soldiers.

Below the macaws, a troupe of monkeys jumped from branch to branch. As they howled loudly, it echoed through the rainforest. Next to the monkeys, a three-toed sloth slowly plodded down a tree. She was so slow that the tree thinks she is part of it.

Underneath the sloth, 4 prickly tree porcupines hung upside down in the bough of a tree. As they hung upside down, a bright and small tree frog crawled up onto a leaf of a colossal kapok tree. Its beady red eyes glowed like devils amidst the dark-green forest. The vines, which strangled the tree, were gnarled. Standing on a tree, a dark-purple orchid plant leaved stood out.

Whilst many other animals were sleeping, the forest floor wasn't. A boa constrictor, which slithered stealthily, was in the camouflaged, dappled light. As it stalked its prey, it hissed loudly. Everything in the forest went still. Not far from the snake a Venus fly trap, which was waiting patiently, for its prey, had very pointy teeth like pincers. Inside the fly trap, many other flies lay there as they withered away. Across from the river, a jaguar lay silently. Hidden in the dappled light, no animal had noticed her. Behind a tree, an unstriped ant eater was looking for ants but little did she know that she was going to be someone else's dinner. A second later, the jaguar growled like thunder. She was getting ready to attack...

By Lucy