

DEEP IN THE AMAZON RAINFOREST

As Tepui wandered deeper into the rainforest, he experienced wondrous sights. On the forest floor he saw dead leaves which were decaying bit by bit. They were also covered in mist. He could also feel the mist on his feet. The heat was like nothing he's felt before.

A jaguar, which had midnight black rosettes on its fur, was padding silently stalking its prey. It was camouflaging in the rainforests misty shadows. A couple of trees away he saw 2 Herculean beetles ready to shoot out a poison dart which can knock you unconscious straight away.

There were luscious perfumed orchids hanging from a kapok tree. They looked vibrant and they were also bright and colourful. There was a boa constrictor slithering under the decaying leaves, camouflaging and stealthily stalking its prey. Its slimy body helps it to slide under the leaves so that it can get its prey.
