

PSHE & RSE at Eastfield Primary Academy A Parent Policy Guide May 2026

This document provides a clear, accessible overview of how Personal, Social, Health and Economic Education (PSHE), including Relationships and Sex Education (RSE), will be taught at Eastfield Primary Academy from September 2026.

It is designed to support parental understanding during consultation. The full PSHE & RSE Policy, which includes detailed curriculum information and statutory references, remains available on our website or from the school office.

PSHE & RSHE in a Nutshell

This short guide gives parents a clear overview of:

- what PSHE and RSHE are and why they matter
- what is statutory in primary schools
- what children learn and how learning builds over time
- the difference between Health Education and Sex Education
- what has been updated or clarified
- how parents can find out more and ask questions

What is PSHE?

PSHE (Personal, Social, Health and Economic Education) supports children's personal development, wellbeing and safety.

Through PSHE, children learn the knowledge, skills and confidence they need to:

- build positive relationships
- understand and manage emotions
- stay safe online and offline
- develop resilience and self-esteem
- make healthy choices
- prepare for later life

Relationships Education and Health Education are taught within our wider PSHE curriculum.

Why do children need PSHE and RSE?

Children are growing up in a complex world. PSHE and RSHE help children to stay safe, understand their bodies and feelings, build healthy relationships, and know who to turn to if they are worried.

This learning supports children's wellbeing now and prepares them for adolescence and secondary school, without introducing information too early.

What is statutory in primary schools?

All primary schools are required by law to teach:

- Relationships Education
- Health Education

These subjects are compulsory for all pupils. Sex education is not statutory in primary schools. Parents have the right to request withdrawal from sex education lessons (see below).

What do children learn in PSHE?

Our PSHE curriculum is age-appropriate and progressive from Reception to Year 6. Children learn about:

- families and friendships
- kindness, respect and caring relationships
- personal boundaries and consent
- bullying and how to get help
- mental wellbeing and emotional health
- online safety and digital awareness
- physical health and healthy lifestyles
- growing and changing, including puberty

How does learning build as children get older?

PSHE and RSHE are taught gradually from Reception to Year 6. Key themes are revisited each year, with learning becoming more detailed as children mature.

What a Reception child learns is very different from what a Year 6 child learns.

How is PSHE taught?

- PSHE is taught weekly by class teachers
- lessons are interactive and discussion-based
- children are never required to share personal experiences
- a clear classroom charter ensures lessons are safe and respectful
- sensitive topics are taught carefully and professionally

We use the Jigsaw PSHE programme, which provides a structured, age-appropriate framework that meets all statutory requirements.

Health Education (Statutory – all pupils)

Health Education is compulsory for all primary-aged pupils, and parents cannot withdraw children from this learning.

At Eastfield Primary Academy, Health Education includes:

- physical and emotional wellbeing
- managing feelings and mental health
- staying safe, including online
- healthy lifestyles and personal hygiene
- puberty and body changes, including menstruation

A note about puberty

Puberty is part of Health Education, not Sex Education. It is taught gradually, before children need to know, using correct terminology and focusing on physical and emotional changes — not sexual activity.

Sex Education (Not Statutory – Years 5 and 6 only)

Sex education is not compulsory in primary schools.

At Eastfield, we choose to teach age-appropriate sex education in Years 5 and 6 to help children be prepared for adolescence and to ensure they receive accurate, factual information.

We define sex education as:

Teaching about sexual intercourse and what happens for a baby to be conceived, and the process of childbirth.

Sex education is taught as part of PSHE and is separate from:

- statutory Health Education (including puberty)
- the Science curriculum (which includes life cycles and reproduction in mammals)

Right to withdraw from sex education

Parents have the right to request withdrawal from sex education lessons taught as part of PSHE.

Parents cannot withdraw children from:

- Relationships Education
- Health Education (including puberty and menstruation)
- Science curriculum content

Before any withdrawal, we invite parents to meet with the Headteacher or PSHE Lead to discuss the curriculum content and support informed decision-making.

Inclusion, respect and diversity

Our PSHE curriculum promotes respect, kindness and empathy. Children learn that families come in many forms and that everyone deserves respect. Teaching challenges stereotypes and bullying in age-appropriate ways.

Safeguarding and keeping children safe

PSHE plays an important role in safeguarding. Through lessons, children learn to:

- recognise unsafe situations
- understand personal boundaries and consent
- know who they can talk to if they are worried
- feel confident asking for help

All staff are trained in safeguarding procedures, and any concerns raised through PSHE are managed in line with the school's safeguarding policies.

What's been updated or clarified?

PSHE and RSE have long been taught at Eastfield. This review has focused on ensuring our provision remains clear, age-appropriate and in line with statutory guidance and best practice.

As part of this review:

- Sex education is now taught only in Years 5 and 6. Sex education content is no longer taught in Year 4, ensuring learning about human reproduction is delivered at a developmentally appropriate stage.
- Health Education (including puberty) continues to be taught in line with national requirements, and parents cannot withdraw children from this statutory learning.
- Digital literacy and online safety learning has been strengthened, reflecting children's increasing engagement with the online world and the importance of staying safe, recognising risk and knowing how to seek help.
- Information for parents about what is statutory and how PSHE is taught has been clarified.

These refinements do not represent a change in the school's values or ethos, but reflect our ongoing commitment to safeguarding, wellbeing and age-appropriate education.

Working with parents and carers

We value strong partnerships with families and support parents by:

- sharing information about PSHE topics
- offering opportunities to view materials
- welcoming questions and discussion

Where can I find more information?

This document is a summary of our approach.

Parents and Carers can access:

- the full PSHE & RSHE Policy on our school website
- curriculum overviews and Knowledge Organisers for each half-term's puzzle (theme)
- parent information leaflets, available on request and to be added to the school website in due course
- RSHE teaching information and materials shared through the Jigsaw Parent Portal, available on request through your child's class teacher
