Early History of Bedfont

Bedfont was once a rural village, full of market gardens and orchards, a place where Londoners would drive out to for a day in the countryside. In fact, during the 1700-1800s, the route from London to the South of England, which ran directly through Bedfont, was so popular with wealthy travellers, that soon, this became a favourite haunt of Highwaymen. As time has passed and with the passing of 2 World wars, Bedfont has grown significantly and it remains a popular place to live which is within touching distance of central London.
