

The power switch: One simple way we can conserve the earth's resources is by not using more electricity than we need. Teach children to turn off lights when they leave a room and turn off the TV if they are not watching it. Particularly at Christmas, when lots of us are using extra Christmas lights, we need to be mindful to turn off anything electrical that we don't really need. Turning off lights saves energy and it also saves money!

Fun Fact: Leaving a 40w incandescent light on for an extra hour uses about .04 kilowatt hours. That may not sound like much, but you would have to ride a bike for almost two and a half days to recreate that energy.
