

Well where did that term go?

It has been lovely welcoming the class back this term and seeing how they have all grown up over the summer.

Some of the children have really good ideas about what they would like to do when they grow up, and have asked some great questions around what they have to do to get there. Others are still just happy doing what they are doing and that's fine - I have challenged all of the children to think about how they can change the world and to not let anyone stop them from doing what they want.

In Geography we have learnt a lot about rivers, especially the River Thames, using lots of different information to learn as much as we can. This was linked to the habitats and creatures we might find in and around rivers and how we classify these animals. The children have shown great empathy for these habitats and our impact on them.

Reminders:

PE days are Monday and Wednesday - we will use the outdoors for as long as we can and Learning in Nature will continue.

What about next term?

Next term our big question is: Hidden Behind the Picture is...? This will have an art and history theme. The term will start with an art day where we will investigate art through our other topic Rocks and Fossils.
