

Lancashire eSafety Charter

Rights

You have the right to enjoy the internet and the benefits it offers.

You have the right to feel safe when using computers and other technologies.

You have the right to be safe from online bullying and the right to report it.

You have the right to explore the internet and to question any information you find.

You have the right to keep information about you private and to tell people only what you want them to know about yourself.

You have the right to decide whether or not you wish to communicate with someone, either online or through other digital technologies.

You have the right to choose whether to fill out forms or answer questions you find on the Internet.

You have the right to object to being filmed or photographed by anyone using cameras, web cams, or mobile phones.

You have the right to object to any videos or images of yourself being placed on the Internet, and to request that they are removed.

You have the right to object to your work being used by other people.

You have the right to be educated about safe use of the internet.

Lancashire eSafety Charter

Responsibilities

You have the responsibility to use the internet sensibly, legally and not to the detriment of others.

You have the responsibility to use technologies legally and respectfully and to inform the relevant authorities, should you encounter inappropriate, illegal or harmful content.

You have the responsibility to treat others with respect and to report online bullying.

You have the responsibility to do this safely, sensibly and legally and to check any information before using it.

You have the responsibility to provide information that is not misleading, to keep your own data safe and not to misuse any information you have about others.

You have the responsibility to be respectful when communicating with others electronically and you should always inform a responsible adult if something makes you feel uncomfortable or you become suspicious of another user's behaviour.

You have the responsibility to do this accurately and legally.

You have the responsibility to protect yourself, by behaving in a way that will avoid embarrassment when videos and photographs are being taken.

You have the responsibility to use images and videos of yourself and others in a respectful and legal manner.

You have the responsibility to ensure you have permission to use other peoples work.

You have the responsibility to put this education into practice both in and beyond school