THE MYPATH GUIDE TO Apprenticeships

WHAT IS AN APPRENTICESHIP?

An apprenticeship is a type of work-based training program where you can learn a specific trade or skill directly from experienced professionals in a real workplace setting whilst getting paid.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

During an apprenticeship, you typically split your time between on-the-job training and classroom-based learning. This combination allows you to apply what you learn in a real work environment while also gaining the theoretical knowledge that supports your practical skills. The goal is to provide you with a well-rounded education and prepare you for a career in a specific field whilst also earning money!

LEVELS

2 This is commonly the starting point for people entering apprenticeships. The level 2 apprenticeships are the equivalent to 5 GCSEs.

4&5 These levels are usually for people with more managerial or technical roles. Level 4 is equivalent to a foundation degree and level 5 is equivalent to a higher national diploma.

3 On a level 3 apprenticeship, an apprentice will develop their knowledge further. This is equivalent to two A Levels.

6&7 These are the highest levels of apprenticeships in the UK. Level 6 is the equivalent to a bachelor's degree and Level 7 is the equivalent to a masters' degree.

MYTHBUSTING

People often think of apprenticeships being all about practical jobs. Did you know you can do an apprenticeship to become a Dentist, Accountant or a Solicitor amongst lots of other jobs?

We welcomed Liverpool John Moores University Screen Skills Roadshow to Holy Family this week. Pupils had the opportunity to talk to TV and film industry insiders including a costume designer, a script supervisor and a cameraman. Pupils heard about roles in the TV and film industry, Liverpool's position as the second most filmed location in the UK and career pathways.

After school, parents and siblings were invited in, to take part in a quiz about Liverpool's TV and film industry and to enjoy some delicious pizza. Four lucky pupils won a £50 LiverpoolOne voucher.

The afternoon was rounded off with a very motivational talk from Colin McKeown from LA Productions. Colin is primarily known as a drama and film producer but has also produced factual, comedy, documentaries and light entertainment programmes.
