

What Is My History?

Timelines

Everybody has a story and everyone's history is unique and special. If someone was researching your life in 200 years, they might record your information on a timeline.

Timelines are a clear way of recording historical information and should always be clearly marked in equal units of time and accurately recorded.

Create a timeline of your life so far.

Your timeline will be measured in years and you should try to record at least ten different events in your life onto your timeline.

1. Divide the line into the number of years you will need, for example, if you were born in 2006 you will need 11 cm as there are 11 years to cover to 2017
2. Note down the years on the timeline in equal measurements.
3. Add ten different events that have occurred to you in your lifetime
4. Extra challenge: Research important events that have happened in the world during your lifetime and add them to your timeline in a different colour.
