

How British Values is Taught in Our School – English Curriculum

The English Curriculum and Fundamental British Values
Democracy	Rule of Law	Individual Liberty	Mutual Respect and Tolerance
The English Curriculum provides opportunities for children to participate in democratic decision-making processes, such as choosing which books to read or which topics to write about. Teachers can encourage children to express their opinions and listen to the opinions of others, and to work collaboratively to reach a consensus. This can help children understand the importance of democratic decision-making and the value of respecting the opinions of others.	The English Curriculum emphasises the importance of following rules and conventions in written and spoken language. Children can learn about the consequences of breaking these rules, such as miscommunication or misunderstandings. Teachers can encourage children to understand the importance of following rules and conventions in communication, and to take responsibility for their own communication.	The English Curriculum provides opportunities for children to express their own thoughts and ideas through writing and speaking. Teachers can encourage children to develop their own unique writing styles and to express themselves freely, while also respecting the opinions and perspectives of others.	The English Curriculum emphasises the importance of effective communication and listening skills. Children can learn about the importance of respecting others' opinions and perspectives, and how to communicate their own thoughts and ideas in a respectful manner. Teachers can encourage children to participate in respectful dialogue and discussion, and to give and receive feedback in a constructive manner. The Primary English Curriculum provides opportunities for children to learn about different cultures and traditions through literature and language. Children can learn about the values and beliefs of different cultures, and how these can be reflected in language and literature. Teachers can use examples from different cultures and traditions to help children appreciate the diversity of thought and belief, and to promote respect for other cultures and beliefs.
