Curriculum

- equip pupils with the knowledge, understanding, skills and attitudes to recognise and challenge examples of inequality and prejudice that they might meet in their lives;
- plan and deliver a curriculum which promotes equal opportunities; that enables pupils to challenge discrimination, stereotyping and differences in aspirations; develops a knowledge and understanding of different individuals and groups, and equips them for life in a diverse community;
- provide opportunities within the curriculum, (appropriate to pupils' age/attainment) for pupils to understand and recognise prejudice/inequality and to challenge the myths and negative stereotypes that underpin prejudicial attitudes;
- use opportunities within the curriculum, extra-curriculum and assemblies to positively affirm the identities of all pupils, and ensure that the different needs of pupils are recognised and met.
- commit to fostering respect for the identities of pupils, students and staff, and their experiences, histories and concerns;

- recognise that every learner should be encouraged to develop skills of non-violent conflict resolution;
- make use of equality-friendly research to ensure teaching and learning styles cater for different needs.
- recognise that all learners are entitled to a broad and balanced education, irrespective of the presence or absence of learners who are from different groups;
- provide appropriate support for any pupil for whom English is an Additional Language, and who has not yet achieved a functional level of English, in order that they can access the curriculum;

Resources

Background/Supporting Information

Gender Equality

Pupils:

- Although girls as a group are achieving better results than boys, they are still being steered towards choices that lead to low paid, low status jobs.
- Boys are generally not achieving the same attainment level as girls, with 52% of boys and 62% of girls in the UK gaining five high grade GCSEs or equivalent by age 16 in 2004/05. The situation is complex however, with certain groups of boys doing as well as girls, whilst other groups of boys doing very badly.
- As Girls aged 7-11 are less than half as likely to take part in physical education and sport compared to boys.
- Research by the Universities of Warwick, Bristol, Durham and North London found that over 75% of 11-12 year old boys thought it was acceptable that women get hit if they make men angry, and more boys than girls of all ages believed that some women deserved to be hit.

Staff (Re: employment – lack of men/women in senior roles):

- The teaching profession is female-dominated but women are under-represented in senior posts. Primary teaching exhibits the highest levels of gender segregation with under 20% of teachers being male.
- Teaching is a female-dominated profession – women make up over 80% of full-time regular teachers, 90% of primary teachers and 66% of secondary teachers in England. In addition to teaching staff, schools employ nearly half a million support staff, a majority of which are also female.
- However, women are severely under-represented in senior posts in schools making up only 30% of secondary head teachers and 64.6% of primary head teachers. An NUT survey found that black and ethnic minority women in particular tend to be under-represented in senior management positions.
- Action is needed to encourage more women to seek promotion and enable them to do so by widening the opportunities for flexible and part-time working. Schools and local authorities should also consider developing mentoring schemes and training for women looking to move into senior management posts. To try and address this the school has:
 - Flexible/Par-time Working Policy
 - Equality of Opportunity for Training & Promotion
 - Work Life Balance

Disability Equality

What do we understand by 'disability'?

An agreed definition of disability supported by the Disability Rights Commission, is:

'a person has a disability if they have a physical or mental impairment which has a substantial and long term adverse effect on their ability to carry out day-to-day activities. (DDA 1995 Part 1 para.1.1) It covers physical or mental impairments, which includes sensory impairments such as those affecting sight or hearing. The term mental impairment is intended to cover a wide range of impairments relating to mental function including what is often known as mental disabilities.'

The definition of disability covers a broad spectrum of impairments, including some of the following:

- cancer
- diabetes
- epilepsy
- HIV
- multiple sclerosis
- hearing or sight impairments
- mobility difficulties
- people with mental health conditions or learning difficulties/disabilities.

We understand that the definition of disability under the Act is different from the eligibility criteria for special educational needs provision. This means that disabled pupils may or may not have special educational needs.

Removing physical barriers - See the School's Accessibility Plan

Reasonable Adjustments - The DDA requires schools to make reasonable adjustments to ensure that disabled pupils and users of the school are not put at a substantial disadvantage and are able to access the same opportunities as non-disabled peers. Specifically, the school intends that disabled pupils and users will have the same access to the curriculum, to information and access to the school environment and facilities as non-disabled pupils and users. In planning developments to deliver this intention the school considers the needs of current and future pupils and users of the school. The main strategies to bring about reasonable adjustments in the next three years are described in the Accessibility Plan, however reasonable adjustments are made on an individual basis according to need, by working collaboratively with disabled persons/or their parents/carers and other outside agencies.

The school will be successful in making reasonable adjustments when disabled persons can, wherever possible, participate fully

- in the classroom
- in the school curriculum
- at all times and in all parts of the building and when
- disabled persons feel part of the life of the school
- disabled persons are included by their peers in all parts of their school life
- parents/carers of disabled students feel their child is part of the school
- staff feel confident in working with disabled pupils
