The following list of government-funded providers of full-time post-16 education is divided into four sections, according to type:

School Sixth Forms

are part of schools that also provide education for students up to Year 11. Some schools co-operate to run a joint sixth form centre. They mostly offer A level studies, but some also offer a few vocational courses, like BTEC. They usually give priority to students who are progressing internally, so places for students applying from other schools could be limited. School Sixth Forms are more likely to have a uniform or dress code than other places of study.

Sixth Form Colleges and 16-19 Schools

specialise in education for 16 -19 year olds and take students from a lot of different schools (though some will give priority to students from the local area). Sixth Form Colleges usually offer a combination of A levels and a wide range of vocational courses, like BTEC. Some 16-19 Schools are similar to school sixth forms in curriculum and learning environment, others are more like sixth form colleges; a few specialise in a vocational area.

University Technical Colleges (UTCs) and Studio Schools are for students between the ages of 14 and 19 and are often based in existing schools or colleges. Priority for places on post-16 courses may be given to students progressing from linked schools. UTCs specialise in subjects that need modern, technical, industry-standard equipment. Studio Schools often have a vocational specialism, and focus on employability skills and a core of academic qualifications, delivered in a practical and project-based way. Hours spent studying on site are usually longer than in other colleges or sixth forms.

Further Education (FE) Colleges provide courses for students of all ages, including many part-time courses. Some have separate classes or even a separate site for 16 -19 year olds. Most of the courses they offer are job-related, like BTECs and more specific skills-based courses that start to qualify you for a job: examples include Hairdressing, beauty therapy, legal executive, accounting and motor vehicle repair. Some specialise in courses for a particular work sector and a few offer A level studies.

NOTE: Due to the limited amount of space available, it has not been possible to provide a complete list of providers within travelling distance. All the current providers in Newham and Waltham Forest, the most popular schools and colleges in surrounding areas and some specialist providers elsewhere have been included.

Details of some other providers can be found on the website www.ucasprogress.com/search
