3 History lessons. This is for the fortnight 22/06/20 – 03/07/20

Lesson 1 – How did the Victorians have fun?

We all like to have fun and we are lucky in our modern world that we have lots of things to keep us entertained. Your task for this lesson is to find out all the different ways in which the Victorians had fun.

You can present your work as either a series of images showing the different activities, a mind-map, a newspaper report or a comparison grid between your fun activities and the Victorian past-times.

Cadburys was one of the famous companies who started during the Industrial Revolution. Your final task for this week is to research the history of chocolate.

Step 1 – Where did chocolate come from?

In this answer you should include where in the world chocolate came from, how it was consumed and how it made its way to Britain.

Step 2 – Create a timeline showing the history of Cadburys chocolate. This should include some of the major events in the company's history such as when it was first founded, its first shop, when the factory was founded, when were various chocolate bars released etc. the more detailed you are the better. If you wanted, you could present your work as a comic strip instead of a timeline.

Challenge- Why is Bournville important to Cadbury's? What is it like there?
