‘An Internet we trust: exploring reliability in the online world’

Fake news

Adverts on websites
and social media

Confident in separating fact from fiction

What is fake news?

False news stories which aren't true- they go online and shared on social media even though the person writing them knows that they are made up.

Stories that may have some truth to them, but the facts aren't clear or checked properly or the writer has exaggerated some of it to mean what they want it to.

Computing GCSE Fake News

Which one do you use the most for information?

Which one is the most accurate?

Most used = least accurate?

Should we stop using the internet for information?

Do we need to create a new way to get information?

A challenge for you

Can you defend getting your information online?

Are their benefits to taking in your information
online?

Let's focus on the positives

 There is lots of it

 Speed and convenience

 Choice

 We are all part of this

 Equality

Views on the news

35%

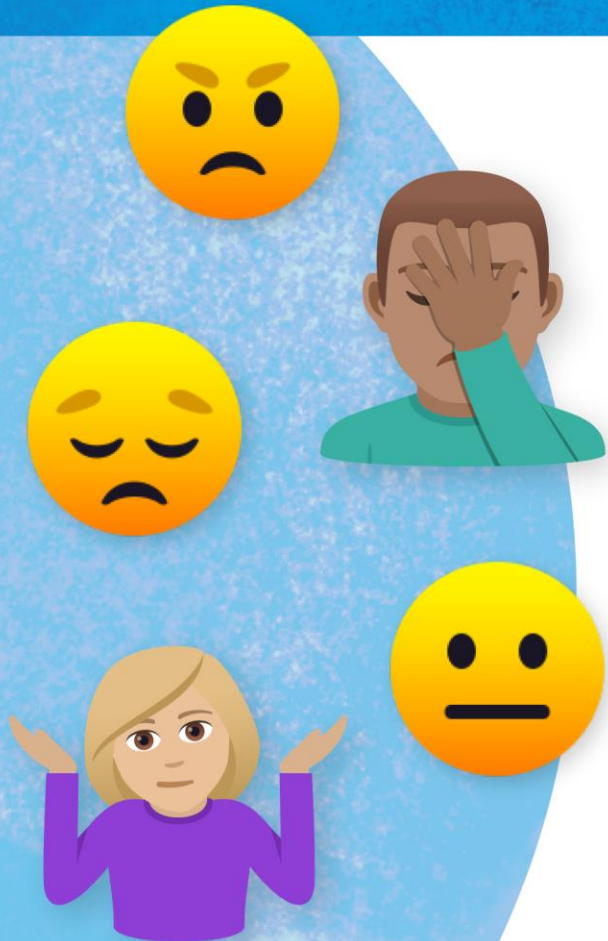

of 12-15 year olds in the UK think that social media provides trustworthy news all or most of the time
