We are very excited to announce that we have launched a school YouTube channel. Some of the private links in your planning will now take you to that channel but please do keep an eye on Mrs Atterton's channel as there will be new content uploaded there publicly which will mean that you can access it without a link in between planning being posted. It's on that channel you will find new stories and class related challenges.

Things you could do to celebrate the Summer Solstice:

- Sun salutations – start the day with some yoga sun salutations. To make your practice even more special, take your mat outside and do your sun salutations as the Sun rises.
- Have a no-interruptions day – The celebrations that mark the turning of the wheel of the year offer a great opportunity to spend special family time.
- Dress up in reds, oranges, yellows and golds – celebrate the Sun God and Earth Goddess within each of you by getting dressed up in vibrant, energising colours. Why not accessorise with some home-made crowns decorated with pretty coloured flowers and jewels.
- Make a Midsummer altar – This is an enjoyable craft activity to enjoy as a family and creates a sacred space in your home to draw all that wonderful Sun energy into your hearts.
- Dance and drum together – Summer Solstice is a time of expansion, joy and bliss. Make the most of these heightened levels of energy to let loose for a while.
- Camp out all night – A great activity to share with older children – what could be more irresistible than the promise of staying up late and having a midnight feast under the stars! Or camp out so that you can wake at dawn on Summer Solstice and watch the Sun rise. If you can, light a little campfire and toast some marshmallows while sharing stories.
- Make sacred Sun water – Fill a clean glass bowl with mineral or spring water and leave outside from dawn on Summer Solstice until noon.
