Rule of Law

Visits to care homes are currently only allowed if certain rules are followed. Rules are often used to help keep us all safe.

Should visits to care homes be allowed?

A charity is seeking a review of the government guidance on care home visits. John's Campaign says many care homes in England are still refusing regular face-to-face visits, despite changes at the end of July that outlined new guidance for visitors. Dr Angela McIntyre, who supports the campaign, has not seen her 92-year-old mother since March. A Department of Health spokesperson said, "We know limiting visits in care homes has been difficult for many families. Our first priority is to prevent infections in care homes, and this means that visiting policy should still be restricted, with alternatives sought wherever possible. Visiting policies should be tailored by the individual care home and take into account local risks in their area."

Do you think care homes should be able to set their own rules, or do you think it is better that the government set a blanket policy? • Share your experiences or care and residential homes. Have you ever visited one? Do you have any family or friends who are currently living in one? This week's useful video (link overleaf) shows one care home's innovative idea of offering drive through visits for family and friends to visit their loved ones. Can you think of any other ideas that would allow care home residents to see their family?
