Top Tips for Toileting

Learning how to use the toilet independently and stopping wearing nappies is a big milestone for your child. There are lots of new and exciting skills for them to learn with your help.

When should you start toilet training?

Most children are ready around 18 months. Research shows it is better for your child to stop using nappies between 18 months and 30 months.

The longer you leave it, the harder it can be for your child to learn this new skill and accept not having a nappy on anymore. When your child wakes with a dry nappy in the morning, they may be ready for night time training.

Should we wait for 'signs of readiness'?

۲

No! Many children and particularly those with additional needs, will never give any signs that they are ready to potty or toilet train. Prepare your child by teaching them the skills they need. When your child shows awareness that they've done a wee or poo, it means they are beginning to recognise the signals their body is giving them.

Help your child feel comfortable with the idea of their bodily functions. Read picture books about potty/toilet training together and have a teddies. Remember that young children learn by watching and copying which means you may have to leave any inhibitions at the toilet door. Show them you do wees and poos too.

Make sure you're ready too

When is a good time? Make sure it's a good time for you as well as your child. It's best to avoid doing it at a time when there are any big changes or disruptions to your child's or family's routine.

Every child is different!

Children with a disability or additional needs can't always communicate their thoughts and feelings so you might not be able to rely on their signals to tell you when they are ready. Most children can be toilet trained; It just might take a bit longer sometimes. The important thing is to support with toileting signs, sounds or words that your child can use and understand and let their bladder and bowel readiness lead the way.

Ignore the myths...and pressures

There are lots of myths around toilet training that are best ignored. A common one is that boys are harder to toilet train than girls. It comes up a lot but there is no evidence to show it is true. Try not to feel pressured by other parents, focus on your child and remember that you know them better than anyone else.

Making the transition from nappy to toilet can be a challenge. It can feel like a battle – but remember it is a developmental skill not a war!

What equipment is needed for potty/toilet training?

A potty (more than one ideally). Choose one that is low to the ground so your child can use it independently. You don't need to spend a lot of money on anything fancy, it must do one job well: catch wee and poo!

Some children may prefer to go straight to using the toilet. If this is your child, get a children's toilet seat and a step stool to help them to feel secure and relaxed. Having feet firmly on the floor or a stool is the ideal position for fully emptying the bladder and bowel.

A travel potty can be helpful when you and your child go out.

Goodbye nappies, hello underwear!

Whatever stage your child is on their journey, stopping using nappies is a big change for them. Make sure your child is drinking enough during the day. Aim for 6-8 drinks a day. Water is the best drink but milk in moderation and well-diluted squash is OK too.

Dress your child in clothes that are easy for them to get on and off, so they can take the lead. If you have a boy, encourage him to sit down on the potty for both wees and poos especially in the beginning. We empty our bladder better sitting down and it helps to prevent constipation.

Using praise and rewards to motivate your child

For most children, encouraging and supporting them to be as independent as possible is the best way to motivate them. Tell them how pleased you are when they se the potty/toilet and use favourite toys such as books or songs to help them feel comfortable using the potty/toilet.
