

Study the pictures below.
Can you see what they have been made from?

When you are next out in your garden or when you next go out for a walk collect as many different leaves, twigs, flowers etc as you can and create your own artwork.

- Think about layering leaves to create feathers or scales.
- Choose appropriate shapes for your image
- Work with the colours- grading from dark to light or use colour for contrast.
- What will you use for a background? Grass, soil, brick, concrete. Could you add detail to the background?
-

Use your imagination and have fun. Please send me photos of your artwork.

Andy Goldsworthy is a British artist and sculptor who creates huge pieces of land art in the environment, using all natural objects such as pebbles, twigs, branches, pine cones, mud, leaves and petals. He said “my remit is to work with nature as a whole” and he has gone a long way to shaping the way we view natural art installations today.

If you would like to find out more about this artist please visit the following page

<https://www.bbc.co.uk/bitesize/clips/zh4wmp3>

EXTENSION TASK

Rather than make a realistic picture you could research the work of Andy Goldsworthy and using the shapes and colours of your found natural objects create a piece of abstract art.