READING MATTERS

Hello!

Dear Readers,

November was all about celebrating the power of real stories, knowledge, and discovery through Non Fiction November.

Our pupils have been busy quizzing on Accelerated Reader, earning high scores, collecting achievement points, and winning special library prizes for their enthusiasm and effort.

As a Catholic school, we also marked All Souls throughout November by sharing books that invite reflection, remembrance, and gratitude for the people who shaped our lives. From biographies to stories of courage and hope, our displays encouraged pupils to read with intention and hold others in their prayers.

In the words of Saint Cecilia, whose feast falls in November, "Be brave and keep your faith strong." This spirit of courage and learning guided our reading journey all month long.

Happy Reading,

Ms. Jarvaid

Librarian's Recommendations

Here are a list of books that highlight the essence of Remembrance. They're awe-inspiring, even when tragic, and they can make us laugh, cry, or jump for joy. I think it's important for us to reflect on our history and learn from it.

Safiyyah's war by Hiba Noor Khan

A young girl helps in the resistance work by members of the Grand Mosque in Paris whose bravery saved the lives of hundreds of Jews during World War II.

Compelling adventure story based on true events.

When the War came Home by Lesley Parr

After the end of the First World War, Natty meets two soldiers who are struggling to cope with what they've been through.

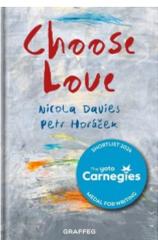

Wonderful story with emotive characters covering mental health, the stigma of being different, and accepting yourself.

When Fishes Flew by Michael Morpurgo

A seventeen-year-old girl travels to her ancestral home of Ithaca and there discovers, with the help of a god, the story of her great aunt's heroic actions during World War II.

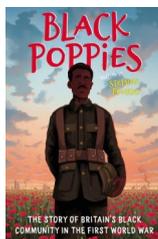

Weaves Greek myth with history to tell a tale of family ties and a talking fish!

Choose Love by Nicola Davies

Choose Love is a cycle of poems that highlights the experience of those forced to become refugees.

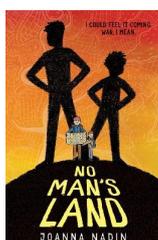

Raw and heartbreaking poems that will invoke compassion and empathy.

Black Poppies: Britain's black community in World War 1 by Stephen Bourne

Discover the stories of black British servicemen who fought on the battlefields in the First World War.

The stories bring the characters to life, highlighting the dedication and bravery of Black British Servicemen and women.

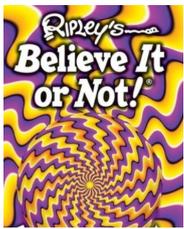

No Man's Land by Joanna Nadin

How the News Works by Jane Marlow

Presents where news comes from, the history of news and how it works around the world, as well as who's who in the news process, what issues are facing the news today, what can we expect from news in the future and so much more.

Magazine-style format and bite-sized chunks of info makes this an accessible resource which covers a lot of useful areas of news and journalism. With the influx of independent journalists on social media and the "fake news" epidemic, this is an essential read for all discerning learners!

WELCOME TO THE NEWS

As a kid, I was really interested in news. But when I was growing up, the internet didn't exist. Yes, I don't seem that old, but the internet was just getting started. The only way to stay up to date was to watch the TV news at a particular time of day. When the bulletin on the radio or in a newspaper, I'd have to wait for the news. And I'd have to read the newspaper headlines to learn what was going on in the world. In the London world, I decided I wanted to be the person who told the news to the world.

TYPES OF NEWS

You've probably noticed that not all news is the same. Some news is about people, some is about events, some is about science, and some is about sports. Different news might be more useful or more important to you. For example, if you're a scientist, you might want to know about the latest news in science. If you're a sports fan, you might want to know about the latest news in sports. It's important for reporters to have detailed knowledge about a specific topic to explain stories accurately. That's why many reporters choose an area to develop as their specialty.

Becoming a correspondent

Being a correspondent is a job that involves reporting on news from different parts of the world. It's a job that requires a lot of travel and a lot of hard work. If you want to become a correspondent, you need to be a good writer and a good reporter. You also need to be able to work in a fast-paced environment and be able to handle a lot of stress.

Making good contacts

ASK ME ANYTHING

ASK ME ANYTHING ABOUT THE NEWS

What's the difference between a news anchor and a news reporter? A news anchor is someone who reads the news on television or radio. A news reporter is someone who goes out into the field to gather news and report on it.

Finding the news you want

There are many ways to find the news you want. You can watch the news on television, listen to the news on the radio, or read the news in a newspaper. You can also find the news online on websites or through news apps. It's important to find a reliable source of news and to check the news from multiple sources to get a complete picture of what's going on in the world.

Some news organizations make decisions to produce news that is more relevant to their audience. For example, the Associated Press, which is one of the largest news organizations in the world, decided to stop reporting on the news about the death of a person who was killed in a car accident. This decision was controversial because many people felt that the news was important and that it should be reported.

Library events

November has been a busy and inspiring month in the library, filled with reading, reflection, creativity, and community. As the darker evenings draw in, pupils have embraced the library as a place of warmth, calm, and curiosity. Our focus for the month was Non Fiction November, a celebration of real stories, real knowledge, and real voices from across history, culture, science, and the natural world. Pupils explored a wide range of topics through our displays and book selections, from space and art to cookery, inventions, biographies, and world cultures. Many pupils also took part in our Accelerated Reader challenge, quizzing with enthusiasm, improving their scores, and winning special prizes for their dedication and progress. It has been wonderful to see how reading for pleasure and reading for learning continue to grow in our school.

As a Catholic school, November also holds special meaning as the month of All Souls. The library highlighted books that encourage reflection, remembrance, and gratitude. Pupils were invited to choose titles that explore resilience, faith, courage, and the lives of people who have shaped history. Our All Souls display encouraged a quiet moment of thought for loved ones and for the many people who inspire us through their stories.

Throughout November, the library has also been an active study space for pupils across the school. Year 7 pupils have been using the library to complete homework, practise independent reading, and develop strong organisational habits that will support them throughout secondary school. Year 11 pupils have made excellent use of the space for revision, working through mock exam preparation, practising past papers, and supporting one another in quiet study groups. Staff have commented on the positive atmosphere the pupils have created through their maturity, focus, and respect for the shared space.

The Social Justice Club and Multicultural Club have continued their work toward the LiveSimply Award, using the library as a base for planning, research, and discussion. Pupils have been exploring themes of gratitude, compassion, equality, and global citizenship through reading and conversation. They have planned awareness activities, created displays, and worked together to understand what it means to live simply, act justly, and care for others. Their commitment to learning about the world and contributing to the school community has been one of the highlights of the term.
