

Elf Class Update

We have two new children, who have joined us this week, and would like to say a warm welcome to our new members, who are settling in very nicely. The Elves have been working really hard learning lots of new and interesting things.

In Maths we have started to read the time, which can be very tricky, and already the children can tell you the time when it is o'clock and half past the hour. We are very proud of them.

During IPC the children have been learning about our Solar System. They have learned the order of the planets and a rhyme to help them remember this. We have looked at the features of the planets and used our knowledge and imagination to produce some incredible art. They are on their way to becoming knowledgeable scientists and very creative artists. Well done Elf class. We also refer to our Rights Respecting Charter to discuss which rights we are accessing this week.

We have been reading 'Whatever Next' by Jill Murphy, a story about a young bear that travels to the Moon. The children have produced some amazing Literacy work and have been writing letters home all about their space adventures.
