Historical Story of the Week On this day in 1914...

W.G. GRACE BATS FOR THE LAST TIME Famous Cricketer Scores 69 Not Out for Eltham

William Gilbert Grace was the pioneer of modern cricket who helped bring it to the public's attention and made it Britain's great summer sport.

In a career spanning 44 years, W.G. Grace revolutionised batting styles and scored just under 55,000 runs. He was born near Bristol and the vast majority of his career was spent playing for Gloucestershire and England.

Grace accumulated hundreds of cricketing records to his name. In 1873 he was the first player to hit a century before lunch and also the first to score over 1,000 runs and take over 100 wickets in the same season. In 1876, while playing for the MCC he not only broke the highest ever previous individual score of 278, set by William Ward in 1820, but went on to become the first player to score over 300 runs in an innings, finishing with 344 runs to his name. For good measure he scored 177 for Gloucestershire two days later and a further 318 just two days on from that. In just one week he had twice beaten a record which William Ward had held for 56 years.

Grace played his final Test in 1899 and severed his almost career long relationship with Gloucestershire the same year. This was because he had accepted an offer from the Crystal Palace Company to set up a new London County Club. Grace was to be the secretary, manager and captain of the new club. He was given an annual salary of £600, worth around £54,000 in today's money, so quite moderate compared to the earnings of the current cricket elite.

In an era where test matches were quite rare, W.G. Grace played for England on 22 occasions in test cricket between 1880 and 1899. He played in what is recognised as the first test match in England against Australia in 1880, scoring 152 in a match which also featured his two brothers, Edward and Fred. He continued to play occasional minor cricket thereafter, with his last batting performance seeing him score 69 for Eltham on the 25th July 1914 at the age of 66. Just over a year later, on 23rd October 1915, W.G. Grace died following a heart attack and the nation mourned a cricketing colossus.
