

Visual Cues

Everyday objects or photographs can be used to help your child understand routine and know what is happening next.

They offer a more permanent reminder than words alone so that if your child is not responding to verbal requests they can get the same cue from the object, photo or symbol.

Use objects/photos/images/symbols to represent everyday activities, routines or places. Show your child the cue immediately before the activity takes place.

Photographs of places or activities can be used to create a timeline or schedule to tell your child what is happening next.

Visual Cues

Everyday objects or photographs can be used to help your child understand routine and know what is happening next.

They offer a more permanent reminder than words alone so that if your child is not responding to verbal requests they can get the same cue from the object, photo or symbol.

Use objects/photos/images/symbols to represent everyday activities, routines or places. Show your child the cue immediately before the activity takes place.

Photographs of places or activities can be used to create a timeline or schedule to tell your child what is happening next.

