

Using a Reward Chart

A reward chart is aimed at encouraging your child to comply or to behave in a certain way.

A chart can last for a week, a day or just for a shorter time than that.

There will be a number of stars or tokens for your child to collect.

The chart will specify what your child needs to do in a positive way, for example, "Kind hands" as opposed to "no hitting."

If your child complies with the behaviour on the chart he/she will get a star.

A full chart may mean a tangible reward/treat to motivate them to continue to comply. Sometimes just getting the star is enough. ( you know your child best)

Children may use reward charts at home but bring them in to show their teacher. Their teacher could then make a fuss of them/ give them a reward in school.

Each reward chart is different. Ask school for help if you want more information.

Using a Reward Chart

A reward chart is aimed at encouraging your child to comply or to behave in a certain way.

A chart can last for a week, a day or just for a shorter time than that.

There will be a number of stars or tokens for your child to collect.

The chart will specify what your child needs to do in a positive way, for example, "Kind hands" as opposed to "no hitting."

If your child complies with the behaviour on the chart he/she will get a star.

A full chart may mean a tangible reward/treat to motivate them to continue to comply. Sometimes just getting the star is enough. ( you know your child best)

Children may use reward charts at home but bring them in to show their teacher. Their teacher could then make a fuss of them/ give them a reward in school.

Each reward chart is different. Ask school for help if you want more information.