

Spot the difference

Watch the boy's box.

Watch the boys box.

Draw a picture of what you
think these sentences mean.

Spot the difference

Watch the boy's box.

Watch the boys box.

When do you use a possessive apostrophe?

When you want to show the reader that an object belongs to someone.

Write a sentence to show that:

- The pen belongs to the teacher
- The toy belongs to the dog
- The hat belongs to the girl

When do you use a possessive apostrophe?

When you want to show the reader that an object belongs to someone.

Write a sentence to show that:

- The pen belongs to the teacher
- The toy belongs to the dog
- The hat belongs to the girl

The teacher's pen

The dog's toy

The girl's hat

Spot the difference

The friendly dog's home.

The friendly dogs' home.

Draw a picture of what you
think these sentences mean.

Spot the difference

The friendly dog's home.

The friendly dogs' home.

Possessive apostrophe

When there is more than one person, the apostrophe is placed after the plural s to show belonging.

Write a sentence to show that:

- The pens belongs to the teachers
- The toys belongs to the dogs
- The Lego belongs to the boys
- The room belongs to James

Possessive apostrophe

When there is more than one person, the apostrophe is placed after the plural s to show belonging.

Write a sentence to show that:

- The pens belongs to the teachers
- The toys belongs to the dogs
- The Lego belongs to the boys
- The room belongs to James

The teachers' pens

The dogs' toys

The boys' Lego

James's room

It is James's room, because there is only one James.

