

GCSE English Language and English Literature

The English department have a policy of inclusion where we believe the study of GCSE Language and Literature is an entitlement for all. We believe that there are many important areas that can be developed alongside the students' ability to write. This includes an appreciation of life and relationships as well as an analysis of our role in society. These areas are explored through poetry, novels and plays. They are also debated through the study of Language where an analysis of the use of persuasive language, descriptive and rhetorical techniques develops important life skills for all students.

English is a compulsory subject. By studying this course, students will be supported to gain qualifications which will be recognised by all employers. This course will also prepare students to study English Literature and English Language at a higher level.
