The fire was stopped just before it reached the palace.	When, where how did the fire start? The fire started on Sunday 2nd September 1666 in Thomas Farriner's bakery on Pudding Lane. It lasted for 5 days. The fire used in for baking was not put out properly.	Why did the fire spread so quickly? The weather was hot and it hadn't rained for months. Houses in London were mainly built from wood and straw which is flammable, especially when it is very dry. The houses were very close together, so fire could spread easily. Strong winds were blowing, which helped the flames to spread.	How did people try to put the fire out? There was no fire brigade so ordinary people used leather buckets and water squirts to try to put the fire out but these did not work. Later in the week, King Charles II ordered buildings to be pulled down to stop the flames from spreading.
	How and when was the fire put out? By Thursday 6th September, the wind had died down so people were able to put out the flames.	How many people died? 6 people died as a result of the fire.	What happened after the fire? 13,200 houses were destroyed by the fire and 70,000 people were left homeless. Many left London to live elsewhere. An organised fire brigade was established and water engines were designed that gave a continuous stream of water when pumped.
