

History Ambassadors

Who Are They?

Our History Ambassadors love to find out about the past and think about what is important about it today: how people, places and ideas have changed over time and what might life be like in the future, learning from our history. Our History Ambassadors are passionate about history, and about sharing their passion with others in school and in the wider community.

What They Do?

They promote and excite others about history in the school. They ensure that history is a subject that is always visible in school and part of the fabric of every pupils' learning, even when they are not in a history lesson. They support the school's history lead by bringing pupils' voices to how we use historical artefacts, by researching interesting historical events and archaeological finds, recommending historical trips and other resources to enhance the curriculum at St Aloysius.

How They Make A Difference?

- Preparing assemblies about historical people and events
- Making displays in the school to showcase history and recognise important people and events
- Selling goods for The Poppy Appeal to raise money for the Royal British Legion
- Promoting national and international events of historical importance in school
- Advocating for history within school, to visitors to the school and the wider community
