

Language Ambassadors

"Knowledge of languages is the doorway to wisdom." - Roger Bacon

Who Are They?

Our Language Ambassadors are a group of pupils that love languages and this includes sign language. They want everyone in school to love languages as much as they do. They work closely with our staff specialists.

What They Do?

They are very busy helping to promote and celebrate languages around our school. Our Language Ambassadors have been busy finding out how many languages are spoken in our school and help to promote this.

From welcoming new starters to reading dual-language books with younger children, the Language Ambassadors are a vital part of making every child feel confident, content and part of our school family.

How They Make A Difference?

It is important that we show respect for each other's languages and cultures by celebrating and learning more about them and the Language Ambassadors at St. Aloysius proudly help to promote this.

Our ambassadors have compiled a list of languages they would like to challenge classmates and their families to learn and research each month. They have carefully linked each language to a special celebration happening around the world at that time.
