Headteacher's Welcome

What is it about our offer that is working really well for you and your young person? What could you be experiencing that is a little niggle to a bigger issue? We want to know. Communication and feedback are at the heart of meeting expectations- our school motto is 'Learning Together: Achieving Together'. With 50% of our motto being the word together, we're committed to our promise of collaboration. There may be a school or Trust online survey from time to time, but this is unlikely to be at the point where you feel you need to feedback. Therefore, I believe the only way to fully meet your expectations is a constant open door, encouraged feedback loop and a promise to abide by our values of Aspire, Respect and Trust when you approach us via your chosen method.

I'd encourage all initial communication with the class team in the first instance, but you are most welcome to approach any staff member, via email, telephone or in person, to unpick anything you're experiencing. Equally, this does not have to be just the challenges, we had two beautiful parent emails this week that we have shared staff wide. I can't tell you the positive impact and pride we feel when you shine a light on the success of your young person. We don't see the school day as a job, we take our role in your child's life very seriously and their achievements are our passion.

KS3

This week, Bute class have been getting active and really enjoying it. We've been exploring the gym equipment together, learning what each piece is used for and how to use it safely. The students had lots of opportunities to move their bodies, build confidence, and understand how being active helps us stay healthy and feel good.

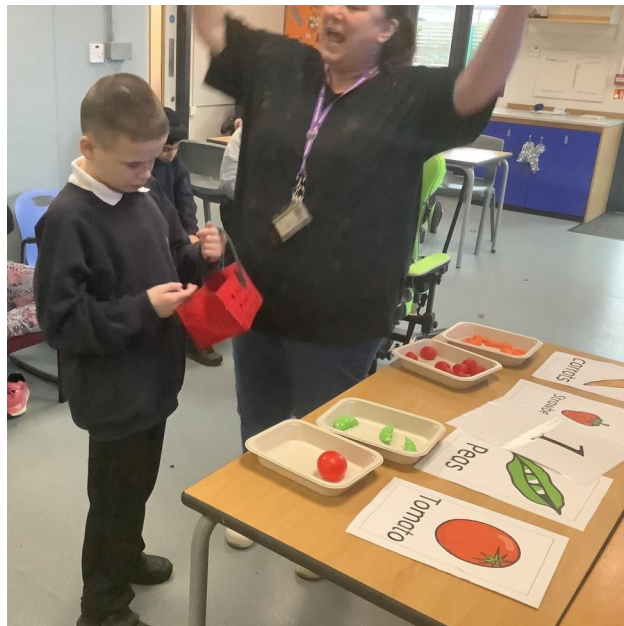

The Glens

This week, Skye students practiced their functional maths skills. Our classroom was set up as a supermarket and students were tasked with looking at a shopping list, then putting the correct number of fruit/veg into their shopping basket. Not only do our fabulous Skye students know their numbers, they also know their fruit and veg! Next step Aldi!

The Highlands

This week in Jura class, we really enjoyed making bird feeders for the forest school area. We made some traditional feeders using lard and bird seed, and we also created others by threading cereal hoops onto string. We have been looking out for birds eating at the feeders, but so far, it has been squirrels who have been enjoying them instead!

This week in Taransay we had a BIRTHDAY 🎂! We also had a lovely fire where we cook a stew. All students took part in helping either by chopping ingredients or helping put the stew on the fire.

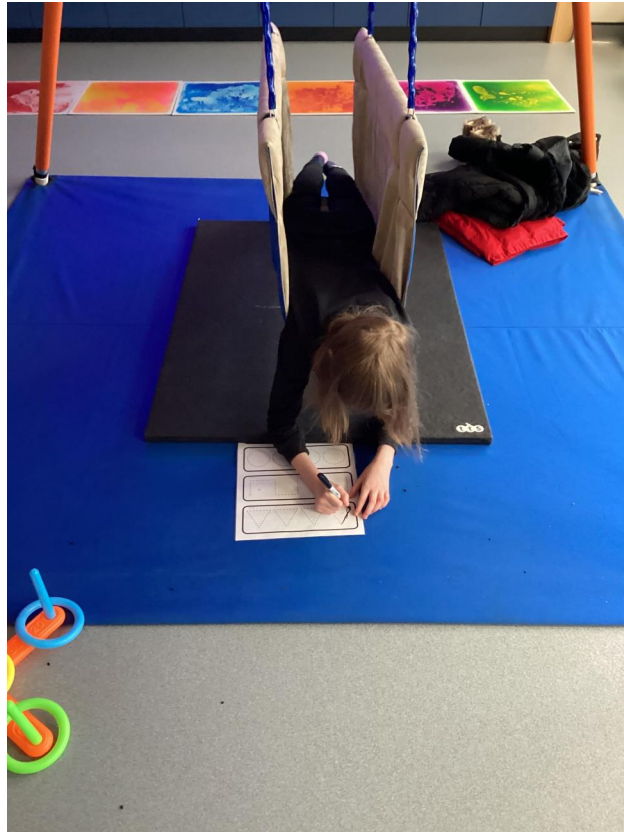

Therapy Input

Lying in prone (on the tummy) in a sensory swing provides deep proprioceptive and vestibular input, which helps regulate the nervous system and promote a calm, alert state. This position encourages weight-bearing through the shoulders and core, supporting postural stability and body awareness, while the gentle, rhythmic movement of the swing helps reduce sensory overload and anxiety. As a result, students are better able to organise their sensory systems, improve attention and focus, and feel settled and ready to engage in learning tasks when they return to the classroom or therapy activities.
