What must I do to inherit eternal life?"

You come here not to gaze at God

but to let God gaze at you

[1]

We could stay with these words for as long as it takes to reawaken our awareness that we already 'possess' eternal life. Like the man in today's gospel, we can't fully understand what that means 'because we can only allow ourselves to be grasped by it. That kind of surrender is needed if we are ever to experience the Eternal within us.' [2] Jesus looked steadily at that young man and loved him. 'Jesus saw that the young man had identified himself with his possessions. His sense of self was wrapped in his belongings. To give them up he felt that he would lose himself.' [3] So he went away sad, for he was a man of many possessions.

'Our 'possessions' can take the shape of a person, ideology, place or thing that we have an attachment for: someone or something to whom we have handed over the power to make us happy or unhappy. To really hear a symphony, we must be sensitively attuned to every instrument in the orchestra. When we take pleasure only in the drum, we cease to hear the symphony because the sound of the drum has blotted out the other instruments. A preference does not damage our capacity to hear and enjoy the other instruments, but the moment our preference turns into attachment, it hardens us to the other sounds and we suddenly undervalue them. Awareness, rather than renunciation, shows us the loss we suffer when we overvalue the drum and when we turn a deaf ear to the rest of the orchestra. When we no longer think that our happiness depends on a person, place or thing, we will move through life living from one moment to the other, wholly absorbed in the present, carrying with us little from the past, living in the eternal now. And we will have found in our heart the answer to the question, "Master, what is it that I must do to gain eternal life?"' [4]
