Discovering the Image in the Stone

'Using the image of a block of stone, we are invited to consider how we see each person we meet. Our response may be: "He does not speak, think, look or act like the members of my group. That is not the way we do things. We can't allow that. She does not have the authority to speak and act that way. She will get in the way of our agenda." We exclude others, creating a stumbling block which prevents them, and us, from becoming who we truly are. 'Stumbling blocks are the patterns of life we have created for ourselves or to which we have been subjected by others but which we perpetuate. They are the habits of seeing, thinking, and acting that blind us to who we, our neighbours and God really are. They distort reality so that we cannot respond appropriately.' [1]

We may choose to respond in a different way to each person we meet. Our response is a reflection of how we see ourselves. Again, using the image of the stone, we can find inspiration in Michelangelo's words: "Every block of stone has a statue inside it, and it is the task of the sculptor to discover it." Michelangelo believed the sculptor was a tool of God, not creating but simply revealing the powerful figures already contained in the marble. There is a story of a young boy who would daily visit a sculptor's workshop and silently watch the sculptor chisel away at a block of marble. One day the boy arrived at the shop to find that the sculptor had finished his work. The block of marble had been transformed into a magnificent lion, poised and powerful and larger than life. For a long time the boy stood in amazement, just looking at the lion. Finally, he turned to the sculptor, his face full of wonder, and asked: "How did you know there was a lion inside that marble?" "The lion in my heart recognised the lion in the marble." [2]

It may take many years of chiselling for us to experience God's hidden Life within us but when we do, we will then find Him within everyone we meet and we will respect how God works through everyone. We will recognise and support the working of the Spirit in each other, knowing that wherever there is love there is God.

"The sculpture is already complete within the marble block, before I start my work. It is already there, I just have to chisel away the superfluous material." [3]
