

FIND

The SEND Newsletter for Lancashire families

Welcome to the Winter issue of the FIND Newsletter, 2021.

As the restrictions to our lives due to the pandemic have eased, and with the Covid-19 vaccine now available to young people aged 12 and over, lots of clubs and social groups have reopened and are offering face to face activities again. Lancashire Targeted Youth Support have SEND Youth Groups in all areas of the county – see pages 6-8 for details. If you know of any other clubs or groups in your area, please let us know and we can include them in a future issue.

The Lancashire Short Breaks Service review and redesign is now almost complete – thank you to all the parents, carers, children, young people and professionals that have contributed to the process over the past two years! The current Lancashire Break Time service will become Break Time from 1st April 2022 – find out more on page 2. In the meantime, Lancashire Break Time activities will continue as usual up to 31st March; details of what's available can be found on the Local Offer page: www.lancashire.gov.uk/children-education-families/special-educational-needs-and-disabilities/things-to-do/lancashire-break-time

I can't believe it's almost Christmas! Are you looking forward to your favourite time of year, or does the word fill you with dread? On page 18 we have our Christmas Survival Guide, with hints and tips to help make the holidays as stress free as possible. If you're looking for gift ideas for a child or young person with additional needs, take a look at the websites on page 19.

If you would like to contribute to a future issue of FIND, or if you are interested in joining our friendly editorial group, please email us at FIND@lancashire.gov.uk

We wish you all a Happy Christmas and a Peaceful New Year.

Thank you all for your continued support

Lancashire Short Breaks Service are pleased to announce the launch of

Break Time

Group based activities for children and young people in Lancashire with special educational needs and/or disabilities (SEND). Services will include play schemes, clubs, groups and activities and can take place after school, at weekends and during school holidays.

REGISTER from 13th December 2021

For access to up to 78 hours of fun activities for your child, and a short break for yourself.

Break Time will replace the current Lancashire Break Time service from 1st April 2022. To attend these activities after that date, children and young people must be on the Break Time register.

Download a form from the Lancashire Local Offer www.lancashire.gov.uk/SEND.

If you need a paper copy, please call 01772 538077 or email cyp-shortbreaks@lancashire.gov.uk

Registration forms must be returned by 21st January 2022 and will be processed in the order they are received.

Break Time is a service which can be accessed by children and young people with special educational needs and/or disabilities who live in Lancashire (excluding Blackburn with Darwen and Blackpool council areas) and who do not receive short breaks following a social care assessment of need.

To see if your child meets the criteria to register for Break Time, please check the Local Offer: www.lancashire.gov.uk/SEND Break Time Plus will be introduced in 2022, to enable children and young people who are looked after or are supported through a social care plan of support, to access a group activity funded through their social care plan. This is intended to provide additional choice and flexibility for children, young people and their carers and families.

Families do not need to register for Break Time Plus; further details will be shared in 2022.

Inclusion for all

I often find myself looking for suitable activities and places to visit with my daughter who has a learning disability, her needs include noise sensitivity and she is very apprehensive of other children. School holidays and weekends highlight the lack of opportunities our children have in comparison to typically developing children, and the feeling of not being particularly inclusive. Actually, it's more than a feeling of being included it's one of wanting to feel acknowledged, valued and wanting others to try and understand that we all think and act differently. In the early years we are always reminded that every child is unique, however as children grow older I feel this is something that we no longer celebrate and start to see behaviours and bodies that are unlike our peers.

Having worked in early years you start seeing that around preschool age, children notice how others differ from themselves. On the whole I have witnessed empathy, acceptance and a genuine desire to help others. With that innocence comes an acceptance for people and things at face value, enabling them to see that person as a whole and not defined by a disability; be it visible or hidden...wouldn't it be wonderful if it stayed that way!

Often disabilities that are seen as being hidden, are actually very visible to those around us. This might be through the use of ear defenders, wearing the sunflower lanyard, displaying sensory behaviours and of course when our children experience meltdowns and distress when out and about. My husband always thinks that everyone now knows why children wear ear defenders, however I feel that is somewhat naive of him. Especially when you catch people looking, as if to say "why on earth is she wearing those", it certainly doesn't feel that way. A friend of mine had a complete stranger question her child's choice of clothing and footwear for the summer weather (not to her face I might add!) That person would not have even thought there might be a reason behind his choices, that he feels most comfortable in those items and in turn better able to face the day. So much of what we live is not obvious to others or for that matter understood.

Through social media we are able to come together as a wider SEN community and this is often invaluable as a way of feeling connected to others. I follow some amazing families and parents who are so in tune with their children, facilitating their needs and at the same time raising an awareness of special needs and disabilities to a wider audience. One of the things that comes from these posts is how we can come across people who don't know even realise the impact they make on others. Caretakers letting a child walk around the school grounds on their daily walk, an adult hospital providing sanctuary in a side room whilst waiting for an appointment, or in our case, the shoe shop letting us come in before opening to be measured, when there is no one around to cause added stress. All these scenarios are what is known as reasonable adjustments and these can be made by us all, often with very little extra effort required.

The siblings of children with disabilities are often the ones who can show others the way. The ones I know are the most amazing humans with skills such as patience, intuition, empathy, negotiation, and often selflessness. Because it's often all they have ever known they adjust, learning to adapt to meet their siblings needs, and in turn moulding them into well rounded future adults. They adapt this knowledge to support other children they meet with needs, and show how this could be the case for all children, if they were to mix with a range of different abilities in school and other areas of life. How enriched would young lives be, and it would equip them with so many attributes for the future workplace and just life in general.

Inclusion is not a token gesture or an opportunity to boost your ego and gain 'likes' from others. Nor is it a late night session to swim or bounce when places begin to wind down for the day. It should be a welcoming environment for all, 365 days a year. It's about people who embrace diversity and strive to make things work for everyone, because they value the happiness and wellbeing of each individual. That's what I think inclusivity would really look and feel like for us all.

POWER

POWER is a youth voice group for young people aged 11-25 with SEND. We support young people to have a voice and influence in all matters which are of importance to them. Providing opportunities for young people to speak with and help shape services within education, health and their local authority. To ensure a wider representation of Lancashire young people's voices are heard we have groups that meet once a month in the following areas plus a monthly Zoom meeting: Gt Harwood, Colne, Walton-le-Dale, Skelmersdale, Lancaster and Lytham St Annes

WHAT POWER MEANS TO ME.

BY OLLY MOORES,
YOUNG PERSON CHAIR OF THE SEND EXECUTIVE BOARD

I think POWER is really important because it gives me the opportunity to develop skills in terms of public speaking and being able to articulate my points in a more clear and concise way. I also think it is vital for young people with SEND needs to be able to have an input on how services should be run in the future, to help future generations of people with disabilities have a better experience than we had when using services! I also believe that young people are experts in their own lives and should be able to influence decision-makers to realise what it is like to use the service and helping make it more user friendly!

With the help of children and young people and their families, the Local Offer webpage is improving with new features being added regularly.

The SEND Directory

The SEND Directory was launched earlier this year. It is a directory of services available for children and young people with SEND, and their families. You can find information about things to do, support for families, contact details for education settings, and much more.

The SEND Directory is growing, with new information being added almost daily. If you wish to include a service or organisation which benefits children and families with SEND, and is free or low cost, please visit:

www.lancashire.gov.uk/SEND and select "Search for SEND Services" then "Include your Service".

New and improved Local Offer homepage

Following focus groups with parent carers and children and young people, the homepage of the Local Offer has changed with the following improvements:

- As suggested by young people, the "blurb" has been removed from the sub-headings to make the titles easier to read and understand.
- There is now a "What's New" section on the homepage which is updated regularly with information relating to SEND which is useful to children and young people and parent carers.
- Colourful icons have been added to the sub-headings to make them more accessible and to make the overall homepage more visually appealing.

Special educational needs and disabilities (SEND) local offer

The SEND Local Offer will:

- Give you information about education health and care services, local activities and support for your family.
- Be developed, reviewed and improved by children and young people, parent carers and practitioners.
- Provide a Directory of useful contacts

Who is it for?

- Children and young people aged 0-25 with special educational needs and disabilities
- Their parent carers and families
- Practitioners and specialists

Exciting news for Lancashire and South Cumbria; Keyworking has arrived

The NHS Long Term Plan includes a commitment that by 2023/24, children and young people with a learning disability and/or who are autistic with the most complex needs will have a designated keyworker, implementing the recommendation made by Dame Christine Lenehan in ‘These are our children’.

The community keyworking model was developed through extensive consultation with young people, parent carers and other stakeholders. Working with the family carer coproduction group, including the National Network of Parent Carer Forums (NNPCF) and Contact, the children and young people’s team defined the scope and outcomes and what mattered to families and young people from their direct experiences. Together the national team developed the outcomes that the keyworking function practice needs to deliver in practical terms for children, young people and their families.

The Council for Disabled Children (CDC), commissioned by Health Education England (HEE), scoped relevant existing and developing keyworker roles to consider what works, what are the challenges and how a new offer may work. Building on this work and with further consultation, the CDC produced guidance on the keyworking functions and competencies for pilot sites.

After a decision-making process, involving the NNPCF regional representatives and other families and young people, pilot areas were appointed – Lancashire and South Cumbria is one of these pilot areas. The pilot commenced in September 2020 with the Keyworking Team commencing in April 2021.

Initially in Lancashire and South Cumbria, keyworking support will be provided to children and young people with a learning disability and/or who are autism who are inpatients in, or at risk of being admitted to, a mental health hospital who are known through the Dynamic Support Database and are aged 0-18 years.

The role of the Keyworking function in Lancashire and South Cumbria is to make sure that these children, young people and their families get the right support at the right time. They will make sure that local systems are responsive to fully meeting the young people’s needs in a coordinated way and that whenever it is possible to provide care and treatment in the community with the right support this becomes the norm.

The Designated Keyworker Development Officers will work with children and young people with the most complex needs and their families and carers to make sure families are fully involved in their plans, feel listened to and informed, plans are personalised, and they have the support they need at the right time, in a co-ordinated way. The keyworking approach is intended to help families experience a reduction in stress and uncertainty and an increase in stability.

There is further work to be introduced in the Keyworking Function Pilot in Lancashire and South Cumbria which focuses on delivering training across the workforce to support practitioner understanding around keyworking. There will be a network of support offered for both parents and practitioners going forward.

There is a Steering group that meets monthly to progress the Keyworking function in Lancashire and South Cumbria. The members of this group are from health, social care, education and parent carers. There is a briefing which is shared after each Steering group meeting which provides updates on work is taking place and things that are happening.

Dance Leaders from Lancashire based charity DanceSyndrome are excited to be back in regular face to face inclusive dance sessions, after being online for the last 18 months during the Coronavirus pandemic.

DanceSyndrome is a multi-award winning dance charity that delivers inclusive dance workshops and dance leadership training, as well as inspiring performances that demonstrate a focus on ability rather than disability. The charity was founded by Jen Blackwell, who happens to have Down’s syndrome, because she found it difficult to find opportunities in community dance due to her disability. DanceSyndrome’s ethos is that disability should never be a barrier to following your dreams. Dancers with and without disabilities work together to inspire people to see what can be achieved when we all become more inclusive. All DanceSyndrome sessions are disability led, with people with learning disabilities taking visible Dance Leader roles.

DanceSyndrome supports many vulnerable adults across Lancashire, many of whom have been shielding during the pandemic. The DanceSyndrome team adapted quickly in the early stages of the pandemic, closing their sessions in March 2020 to offer online dance sessions via Zoom and YouTube. They wanted to limit the impact of isolation on participants and continue to make them feel a part of what they refer to as “the dancing family”. They decided to take their pre-lockdown workshops online to bring the sessions to regular participants and anyone else who wanted to use them to stay active at home during isolation.

As lockdown started to ease, the DS Collective performance team started social distanced rehearsals and filming of their performance pieces in Miller Park in Preston. Following further relaxation of government guidelines on 19th July, DanceSyndrome have been able to start a phased return to indoor dance sessions at Plungington Community Centre and St Mary’s Centre, Clitheroe. The sessions include Everybody Dance, Street Dance, Musical Jazz, Ballet, Contemporary Dance and a new Rave session with glow sticks, which was such a success online that a new in-person class has been created!

DanceSyndrome Managing Director, Dawn Vickers said “Before the pandemic started, we engaged with over 150 participants and volunteers each week in our Lancashire centres. When we were forced to close in March 2020, we knew how valuable dance was going to be for our members for their health and wellbeing and to prevent them from becoming isolated, so we adapted really quickly to offer online sessions in a range of formats, for people of all ages.

“I’m so proud of how our team responded to this challenge! The team were determined to adapt quickly and creatively so that everyone could carry on dancing whilst remaining safe in their own homes. Our dancers with and without disabilities came together, as they always do, to offer an extensive program of dance, that didn’t just cater to those original 150 participants, but actually reached over 600 people, not just from across the UK but from around the world, including Europe, the USA and South Africa!

“The plan was that our online sessions would help people to stay physically and mentally well until we could all be back together in our regular dance sessions. Those sessions all returned on 19th July when the government regulations ended. We are absolutely delighted to be back in a room with our participants again. It feels incredible!

“We do understand, though, that not everyone is ready to get back to their pre-pandemic activities, especially if they are vulnerable. For this reason, and to stay in touch with those new participants who aren’t based in Lancashire, we are continuing with our full programme of Zoom activities too. This means that the number of weekly sessions that DanceSyndrome is offering has doubled from 10 pre-pandemic to 20 post-lockdown! This is an amazing achievement for our team, who have worked so hard all through the pandemic.”

If you would like to join DanceSyndrome, either online or in person, you can find all the details about the sessions at www.dancesyndrome.co.uk/events

DanceSyndrome secures Tackling Inequalities Funding

DanceSyndrome is thrilled to have received a grant to support the work of Dance Leaders with learning disabilities as the charity develops a strategy for recovery from the Covid-19 pandemic.

Funding from the Tackling Inequalities Fund (National Lottery funding from Sport England) will enable DanceSyndrome to grow the number of online dance sessions that they offer after the pandemic demonstrated a huge online demand for their unique Disabled person-led dance model. Two new sessions will be created to ensure that everyone can still access dance activities as things “get to normal”. There will be an “Everybody Dance” workshop on Mondays at 7pm, where people of all ages and abilities can enjoy a range of styles of music and dance together. The second will be the Friday Night Dance Party, where each week the participants will take inspiration from a different decade of dance music.

The Tackling Inequalities Fund exists to help to reduce the negative impact of coronavirus and the widening of the inequalities in sport and physical activity.

Research by Sport England at the start of the pandemic showed that certain groups of people were being disproportionately affected by the crisis and it was significantly impacting their ability to be physically active.

DanceSyndrome Managing Director Julie Nicholson said:
“The pandemic highlighted to us that DanceSyndrome’s inclusive model of co-delivered dance can’t be found anywhere else and that there is significant demand for it across the UK and the world!”

“While DanceSyndrome considers how we address the need for that with in-person sessions, the popularity of Zoom has allowed us to meet people’s needs through online dance. Brand new ideas like Rave with Bex and Dave have taken off online and become so popular we have started them in the community too, so we would love to do more of this kind of innovation.”

“We’re really grateful for funding from the Tackling Inequalities Fund to help us to do this.”

MAKEITBLUE supports DanceSyndrome fundraiser

A national organisation supporting mental health charities has chosen to boost the fundraising efforts of Lancashire based charity DanceSyndrome as they plan for their future in the changing post-pandemic world.

MAKEITBLUE CIC is a non-profit company dedicated to raising funds for mental health charities. Formed by a group of live events professionals, they work on arts, entertainment and cultural projects to raise funds and awareness of mental health issues. Last year, they launched the #LightItBlue campaign to thank NHS staff and healthcare workers fighting Covid. They also ran a charity art auction in aid of events industry professionals suffering from Covid-related mental health problems.

In order to survive through such challenging times, DanceSyndrome are running an ambitious fundraising campaign to support the charity as it moves back into the community after so long delivering online. MAKEITBLUE have donated £500 to kick-start this campaign, which has a target of £10,000.

The campaign is called “We Like to Move It, Move It” and encourages people to use any form of movement activity to improve their own mental health and fundraise at the same time.

DanceSyndrome Managing Director Dawn Vickers said “We’re incredibly grateful to MAKEITBLUE for supporting our fundraising efforts this year, which has been one of the most challenging years in our 12 year history. It is always a privilege to collaborate with like-minded organisations who are working to achieve the same goals. Dance and positive mental health are so closely linked and we’re grateful to be given the opportunity to work with them to share that important message.”

Fabulous fundraising ideas so far have included a daily boxing target of 1000 punches by DanceSyndrome Dance Leader and Ambassador Becky Rich, a non-stop sailing campaign around the UK by Founders Sue and Malcolm Blackwell and a charity fundraising walk by DanceSyndrome Star Supporter Christopher Reid, who is walking in memory of his dad, who loved to dance.

Young carers - protect yourself and your family from flu

Flu can be a very unpleasant illness in children and adults including fever, chills and aching muscles and some may need to go to hospital for treatment. The best way to protect yourself and your family is by having the flu vaccination.

For most children and young people up to the age of 18, the flu vaccine is given as a nasal spray. The vaccine has been used over the last eight years in the UK where millions of children have been vaccinated. It is safe, quick, effective and painless. The flu vaccine is provided in schools to all primary and secondary school children.

GP practices give the flu vaccination to children, young people and adults with certain long-term illnesses such as diabetes and asthma (requiring a regular preventer inhaler).

They also provide flu vaccination for carers. The flu vaccination is free to these groups of people.

Vaccinating children and young carers each year not only offers protection to them, but also to more vulnerable family members that they may be caring for, and others in our communities. Reducing the chances of catching flu could also mean children and adults are less likely to need time off school or work due to illness, or to care for sick family members.

Types of flu can vary from year to year, so even if you were vaccinated last year it is important that you are protected for this coming season. Most children and young people will need a parent or guardian to give consent for them to have the vaccination, so talk to them today, protect yourself from flu and have your free flu vaccination.

CHRISTMAS

Survival Guide

Christmas can be an exciting and fun time. But new activity can be overwhelming for some of us, even more so at the moment, when we're still dealing with the impact of coronavirus. Careful planning and good communication can help everyone to enjoy a Happy Christmas.

Think about what works for your family – don't feel pressured into doing things just because it's Christmas. Make your own traditions!

Talk to your child and prepare them for the changes. Make a visual planner for what will happen and when – buying a tree, decorating the house, visits and parties etc. Include some quiet days when you can just spend time together.

Help and encourage your child to make and give cards or gifts. This provides an excellent opportunity to work on social skills, like thinking of other people's needs and interests, and being kind and helpful.

Not everyone likes surprises, so help your child make a list of things they would like, and stick to the list. Ask family and friends to choose something from the list too.

Avoid the concept of Santa's "good and naughty" list. For some children, the stress of worrying about being on the naughty list can become overwhelming.

When wrapping presents, first remove any extra packaging and fiddly ties. For toys with batteries, make sure they are fitted and working before wrapping.

A piece of fabric tied with a ribbon is a good substitute for wrapping paper – good for those with limited motor skills, and reusable, so environmentally friendly too! You could also wrap presents with tin foil for a sensory parcel that's easy to open, or if unwrapping is overwhelming for your child, put unwrapped gifts in a plain bag.

If your child gets overwhelmed with too many presents, remember they don't need to open everything at once! Limit the number of parcels and spread them out over a few days.

Create a "Christmas free" space at home where your child can take a break if it all becomes too much.

When you are out visiting, take a backpack filled with things that your child finds comforting, eg favourite toys, a few books, headphones to listen to music. If they get over stimulated, find a quiet corner or room and pull out the backpack.

Friends and family may not know how they can help unless you tell them. Give them a list of things they can do to support you and your child.

Do you have any tips to share with other parents? What does your family do differently that works well for your child? Email your suggestions to: FIND@lancashire.gov.uk

What are carers saying about Mindfulness?

"At the beginning of the course I had no expectations as I did not understand what mindfulness was or if I could gain anything from it. I knew that I was exhausted."

These are the words of a long-term carer, who was really struggling to cope with her situation.

Being a carer has huge potential for all sorts of rewards: it increases our empathy, it helps us to grow as individuals and families. But no doubt it takes its toll on physical, emotional and mental wellbeing, and carers find themselves running on empty. To convey this key idea of the need for carers to look after ourselves, we can use the analogy of the safety instructions on a flight to put your own life jacket and oxygen mask on before helping others.

One of the most important aspects of the mindfulness and compassion training for family carers is self-compassion – with an emphasis on the importance of looking after ourselves first and foremost. It is often apparent that carers are not used to doing this.

The Mindfulness Based Living Course is delivered by a Mindfulness Association qualified instructor whose life journey as a parent carer for 23 years took her from the depths of being unsupported and burnt out, eventually to a place of stability and self-compassion. Another carer, having completed the course, writes:

"I can now be kinder to myself and realise that not everything in life can be solved, and there are different ways to deal with physical, emotional and mental thoughts, feelings and problems. I felt these were making me ill and resulted in me not being the carer I wanted to be."

The course is delivered online over 8 weeks, in one and a half hour sessions. There is a recognition that carers have little spare time and energy to spend in meditation, so as well as offering participants the chance to learn new skills of breathing and stabilising meditation, body scan, and other formal practices, the course offers everyday life practices that can be done on the go, bringing a mindful approach to activities we already do. There is a manual and an app that support the learning, and participants have the chance to share their experiences and learn from and support each other in the online group.

Another carer comments:

"To be honest I wasn't expecting this course to change anything for me. I knew nothing of mindfulness although I had read a little on CBT and meditation. In reality it has changed everything. No one is more surprised than me. It has made me begin to have a more positive approach towards myself."

"I feel I am kinder, and I have realised that life doesn't stop for mindful practise. My formal and informal practice have taught me that nothing stops and life doesn't change, but actually that is alright."

So, Mindfulness is not a magic bullet. It doesn't make all the problems carers face go away. What a course like this can offer is a toolkit of resources to make us more resilient and able to cope with the situations we can't change. In other words, a life-jacket.

Back to the first carer:

"This course has helped me to begin to find me again. Being in a group has been helpful. The course has taught me so much about myself and my relationships with others. The practice has begun to be part of my life now and it will, I know, benefit me and others from this time forward"

To find out more about the next round of Mindfulness Based Living Courses delivered online in Spring 2022, contact katekonchog@gmail.com

My desire to deliver mindfulness to family carers reflects my own journey over many years as I travelled from the painful depths of being an unsupported and unmindful full-time mother and carer, through learning mindfulness and self-compassion, to finding myself stabilising and even beginning to flourish.

From my experience, family carers do not feel they have time to include much formal mindfulness practice into their lives, so in my course I will emphasise informal and 'daily life' practices that would be easily achievable day by day. To encourage a regular formal practice, each guided practice in the MBLC course is available via the app, for the participants to practice with at home.

I will share ideas with the carers about taking comfort in small things, similar to the practice of Hygge in Denmark (meaning wellbeing, taking its origins from Norway in the 19th Century, and meaning to find comfort, rest and safety whilst regaining energy and courage).

One of the most important aspects of the training I aim to provide to family carers is an emphasis on the importance of looking after themselves first and foremost. It is often apparent that carers are not used to doing this. To convey this key idea, I use the analogy of the safety instructions on a flight to put your own life jacket and oxygen mask on before helping others.
