

Ending Sentences

A full stop shows the end of a sentence.

Thomas is short!

This sentence ends here.

Harry is tall.

A question mark ends a sentence that asks a question.

How old are you?

Are you okay?

Read the following text. It is missing a full stop.
Put a full stop in the right place.

My mum made me try mushrooms.
I thought they were disgusting.

This full stop shows where the first sentence ends.

- 1 Read the following text. Add in the two missing full stops and two missing question marks in the right places.

We are going to have pizza for dinner
What toppings do you want on yours
When we have finished, we will watch a film Would you like to watch a comedy

Questions always end with a question mark and statements end with a full stop or an exclamation mark.

Ending Sentences

Exclamation marks are used when someone feels strongly about something. Exclamations usually end in an exclamation mark.

How well they sing! What a pity that is!
What a lovely surprise that was!

Read the text below. Underline the two exclamations in it.

"What a marvellous costume that is!" announced Lorraine.
"Thanks," replied Sam, grinning from ear to ear.
"How splendid it is!" added Marcus.

Most exclamations end with an exclamation mark.

2 Underline the exclamation in the text below.

"What an annoying mouse he is!" cried Karen, as Squeaky ran towards the kitchen. She ran after him as fast as she could.

3 Fill in each gap with a full stop, a question mark or an exclamation mark.

How quickly you run ____

Would you like to go ice-skating with me tomorrow ____

My bedroom is painted purple and silver ____

Don't drift off...

Finish all of your sentences with the right punctuation.

