Dancing In The Street: Music At Home

These activities follow on from the learning you have been doing in school. Every time you do a Music At Home session, work through some or all of the activities. Try doing these with people you live with.

Listen to a different Listen and Appraise song each time, starting with Dancing In The Street. Talk about the music using the questions as a guide.

Play the Games Track and find the pulse or copy the rhythms. Copy back the riffs. If you don't have an instrument, sing the pitches back to 'La'.

Listen to Sing the Song and then join in, a verse at a time. When you feel ready use the 'backing only' and be the singing stars!

If you have an instrument at home, try playing along with the song. Pick the easy or medium part and join in when you can. If you don't have an instrument at home, make one or download an app.

Compose with the Song. To start, choose a five-note set and use the blocks to create your rhythm. Explore different ways of making bars with up to 4 beats in. Can you write them with musical notes on the rhythm staff? Change the pitch of the notes by moving them up and down and challenge yourself by trying to place the notes on the staff!

Perform the Song. Record your performance. Is there anything you could do better another time?

Listen to the full song and discuss the questions with an adult at home.

The screenshot shows an interactive music learning interface. At the top, the title is "Listen and Appraise - Dancing In The Street by Martha & The Vandellas". Below the title are four question cards, each with an illustration and a question:

- How does this song make you feel? (Illustration: A person thinking, a person dancing, and a person with a question mark above their head.)
- Does this song tell a story? (Illustration: A person dancing and a person with a question mark above their head.)
- What does the song make you think of? (Illustration: A person with a question mark above their head, a person with a cowboy hat, and a person with a witch hat.)
- How old is this piece of music? (Illustration: A person with a question mark above their head, a person with a question mark above their head, and a person with a question mark above their head.)

Below the question cards is a text prompt: "Think about these questions as you listen to the music, find and move to the pulse." Below this is a music player interface with a waveform and a play button. The music player has tabs for "Listening", "Appraising", "Extended listening", "Fast Facts", and "History". The "Listening" tab is selected. The waveform shows a pulse that corresponds to the questions above. A sidebar on the right contains a list of activities, with "Listen and Appraise - Dancing In The Street" selected.

You can also do some extra reading about the song.

Once you have completed this you must click on 'Games Track- Dancing in the Street'. Try to find the correct rhythm and pulse.
