

Welcome to Wagtails book blog 11.6.21

We have been reading the story of Iggy Peck Architect during our English lessons. We started by being challenged to create stable structures.

The story is about a little boy called Iggy who loves to build. He builds from almost anything. He even built a tower from dirty nappies! Iggy's teacher, Miss Greer, won't let Iggy build in class and this makes him very sad. He starts to really dislike school. One day on a school outing Iggy's building skills save the day when the class become stranded on an island. Iggy, with the help of the other children in the class, build a bridge to get the class across the river.

After we had read the story we challenged ourselves again. This time we made bridges from junk material.
