

RHE Curriculum Progression Map

RHE Curriculum Intent

Through the teaching of Relationship and Health Education we aim to develop the skills, knowledge and attributes children need to be able to keep themselves healthy and safe and prepared for life and work. These are taught progressively and in context through three core themes of health and well-being, relationships and living in the wider world (including economic well-being, aspects of careers education, rule of law and democracy).

The school utilises the PSHE association guidance for lesson plans and resources to support in ensuring all aspects of RHE are taught effectively and appropriately; these lesson plans are adapted where appropriate to reflect the circumstances of our children and the curriculum that they are engaged in. They can be and often are interwoven with other curriculum areas to ensure children fully understand the concepts in a range of contexts.

Key themes throughout our curriculum and school ethos are the development and application of lifelong learning skills reflected by the school's 6R's - Resilience, Responsibility, Readiness, Resourcefulness, Reasoning and Reflection. These key attributes are developed throughout each and every lesson and area of our school, not just through discreet RHE lessons.

It is important to us that as a school we develop confident and independent children who not only understand their place in their community but also children who understand mutual respect and demonstrate tolerance of other faiths and cultures. We teach our children to value the similarities and differences in others that make up that community and also the wider world not only through the teaching of RHE but also within our wider curriculum and everyday experiences.
