Employability

Think carefully about which areas you are interested in and where you want to further your knowledge and skills to support your Plan A, B and C.

Lectures and events

There are a huge number of public lectures being organised each week in London by universities and museums along with independent organisations. It is worth searching online for areas of interest. Below are a few suggestions of where to start:

www.gresham.ac.uk: free videos and lectures at university

educational level

Journals

JSTOR is an excellent digital library of academic journals, books, and primary sources.

How to use JSTOR

1. Go to the jstor website <http://www.jstor.org/>
2. Click login
3. Enter the Username: "twyfordschool" and password: "twyfords4jstor"
4. You can now access the articles – there are two main ways of doing this
 - a. Via Browse at the top, select and click titles, and then select journals (we don't have access to books) – you then select the relevant letter, and can access any article from within your chosen journal
 - b. Via search at the top, where you can select any key words, dates, languages, and themes that you want to try to find relevant articles
5. When you have found your chosen article, you can search for key terms within it, download it as a pdf, get the reference from the article.
