

| Case Study:   | Bullying or banter? | What should the victim/friend do? | Mega Challenge:What might the consequences be? |
|---|---------------------|-----------------------------------|--|
| Amy has been assigned Ben as a partner in a chemistry lesson. The teacher tells the students to come and choose two jugs for mixing their chemicals in. Ben nudges his friend and says, 'But Amy already has good jugs, eh?' They laugh. |                     |                                   |  |
| Rob, Tim and Mo are walking home from school. Mo starts talking about how he's too skint to pay for the bus fare to football. Tim jokes saying 'you know what they say Mo - mo' money, mo' problems.'                                    |                     |                                   |  |
| Tammy walks past a load of the Year 11 girls in the corridor. One of them shouts 'hey it's Spam-head! Oi Spam-head!' Tammy looks upset. The girl then shouts, 'hey cheer up you misery, its only banter!'                                |                     |                                   |  |
| Reg and his mates are playing football, Reg scores the winning goal. His mates all sing their usual chant 'he's the ginger winner!' Reg loves this and runs round hugging his team mates.  |                     |                                   |  |