

In the past England has been inhabited by many different groups of people. Each of those groups has contributed to what the country is like today, as well as the English language. Without influences from other countries the English language would not be what it is today. Think about it in terms of food and the sheer variety we are able to access in England today.

This is a helpful site to find out more about place names.

Activity 1 - Using an atlas (if you have one available) or Google maps plot on some of the place names from the previous page onto the map of Britain? What do you notice? What can we tell about how Britain and in particular England was settled by looking at the meanings of different place names and where each place is located?

This is a challenging activity and normally we would have completed this in groups, so if you struggle with this then just move on to activity 2 which is the main focus for today:)

Activity 2 - You have a copy of a broken timeline, where the dates and events do not match. Your job is to order the timeline and match the events to the correct dates using what we have learnt today and your own reasoning and researching skills. You can type the who, what, when, phase onto the timeline template provided or you could draw a timeline out yourself adding the key points and dates on the timeline plus illustrations if you wish to.
