

Improving Your Reading with Summarising Sheba: In Paris

John Scott and Arnaud Dubois walked together down a great boulevard of Paris. The young American's heart was filled with grief and anger. The Frenchman felt the same grief but also a fierce, burning rage best described as a fury. Both had heard the sound of cannons on the horizon that morning and they knew the German conquerors were advancing. They were always advancing. Nothing had stopped them. The metal and stone of the defences had crumbled before their huge guns like china breaking under a stone.

Less than one month later, the legions were already invading the City of Light.

A sea of grey uniforms could be seen from the top of the Eiffel Tower as they approached the city. It seemed that everything was lost before the war was fairly begun. John could feel the weight of the enemy's presence pressing upon him, giving him no time to breathe.
