Subjunctive mood

You should've learnt about this yesterday, so just a short recap.

Copy the sentence and circle the word that indicates subjunctive mood.

- I wish that we could go back to school!
- I suggested to Jack he come here to solve the issue.
- I doubt whether Toby would come.

Contraction

Copy these words out with the correct contraction - remember your apostrophes!

For example - can not = can't

1. should not

2. would not

3. he would

4. they are

5. I have

6. Are not

7. she would

8. they will

9. they had

10. I am

King Midas

If you have to go back and reread the Midas touch - sent on Thursday last week.

Make sure you have a good idea of the story.

Obviously, the main character is King Midas soooooo.....

Make a list now of at least 5 pronouns for King Midas - make them interesting

Here are some, but you can't use them in your 5!

He

The man

The king

You can expand on them (use adjectives)

Your writing task this week is to create a re-count of the Midas touch story.

There are different versions of this text out there, you are free to search them and create your re-count on them if you wish.

It will be a long peice (6 paragrpahs) that we will be assessing in school and via class dojo

Your storyboard from yesterday could help you with your plan

On the next slide is an example plan that you can use if you like, but you must add to it

A good plan will have the key point of the paragraph, adjectives plus phrases you can use and what sentence types you think would fit in well during that paragraph.

Example plan

King Midas meeting the wine god - wish granted - does it work?

Starts to realise he can't eat - ends up turning his wife to gold

Washes in the river - has to live with the knowledge that he killed his wife - goes to live in th woods.

Brief description of King Midas
Then introduction to the satyr

Skipping home turning things to gold - enter palace

Begs the wine god to get rid of his power

It is your task now to complete your own plan - make sure it is detailed - this will help you for the rest of the week.
